Senate Votes $200-$500 Muster-Out Pay as 'Gift'

Cost Estimated At 3 to 4 Billions; Bonus Legislation Not Precluded

By the Associated Press

With breakneck speed, the Senate approved overwhelmingly and sent to the House yesterday a "Christmas gift" measure to provide mustering-out pay ranging from $200 to $500 for men and women in the armed forces.

The Senate acted after only a little more than an hour's debate and without the formality of a roll call vote after Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky had urged a "Christmas present" to the fighting forces.

Scale of Payments

Under the measure, $500 would be paid to each man and woman up to and including the rank of colonel who had served 18 months or more overseas or in Alaska. One-third of the sum would be paid on termination of service and the remainder in two monthly installments.

The mustering-out pay would be $400 for 12 to 18 months overseas service and $300 for less. Persons who served more than 12 months in this country would get $300 and those serving less than that $200. All payments except that of $200 would be in three equal installments, the latter being paid in two monthly checks.

Estimates of the over-all cost of this reward for service, recommended in a message to Congress by President Roosevelt, ranged from three billion dollars fixed by Barkley to four billion estimated by Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, who headed a subcommittee which whipped the bill into shape.

Is Not a Bonus

Since the payments will be made to all persons below the rank of brigadier general who have been honorably discharged from the armed forces since December 7, 1941, Johnson estimated accrued obligations at 350 million dollars. The mustering-out pay, however, would not be available to persons who obtained discharges through their own initiative or who are entitled to retirement pay.

Senator McFarland (Democrat) of Arizona made the point that action on the measure would not preclude later consideration of bonus legislation and Barkley agreed, asserting that the mustering-out payment was intended only to aid service personnel in readjustment to civilian life.

25 Soldiers Die When Maneuver Boat Capsizes

New Orleans, Dec. 17 (AP).—Capt. T. F. Reece, public relations officer at LaGarde General Hospital, said tonight that 25 soldiers were known to be dead as a result of the capsizing of a 60-foot cruiser-type boat on maneuvers about 3 miles offshore in Lake Pontchartrain. A number of others were injured.

Eighteen of the men had been brought to LaGarde General Hospital and seven to the Port of Embarkation Hospital here.

Reece said the accident occurred about 9:30 a. m.

The victims were part of a group of about 300 men being taken aboard seven vessels to the rifle range at Slidell, La., for maneuvers.

Approximately 72 men, members of Companies A and B of the Second P. C. Transport Battalion from Camp Harahan, were aboard the capsized vessel, Captain Reece said.

70 Dead Are Counted In N. C. Train Wreck

Haunting Memories

The Light That Failed

Lumberton, N. C., Dec. 17 (AP).—While wrecking crews continued to cut into the mass of twisted steel for more bodies the Red Cross tonight revised its figures downward and placed the death toll in the Atlantic Coast Line wreck near here yesterday at 70—47 servicemen and 23 civilians.

The tracks were cleared late today of the telescoped cars of the two streamliners and traffic was resumed over the ACL's North-South double trunk lines. Whether there were additional bodies in the wreckage moved off the tracks was not known.

Before the tracks were cleared six more bodies were found—3 sailors, 2 soldiers and 1 WAVE.

The first train to move over the rails was a northbound passenger train and as it passed the door of a baggage car swung open and long rows of caskets were bared to the view of wrecking crews and onlookers.

Meantime, C. G. Sibley, vice president, announced from the railroad's general offices in Wilmington that "a formal investigation" would be made into the causes of the wreck.

Sibley had previously explained that a broken rail caused the derailment of three coaches of the Florida-bound Tamiami West Coast Champion at 12:50 a. m. About 35 minutes later, he added, the north-

Congress Gives CCC Reprieve Till February

Acts After Promise No New Subsidies Will Be Instituted

By Christine Sadler

After Majority Leader Barkley promised the Administration would not institute any new food subsidies during the 60-day "reprieve" desired for a compromise period, both the Senate and House voted yesterday to extend the Commodity Credit Corp.'s life into February with no strings attached.

Meantime, it was revealed the War Food Administration late Thursday night—evidently eager to get in under the wire—had decided on a CCC subsidy of about $12 a ton for grapefruit processed into juice for civilians and a subsidy to absorb part of the freight costs on onions shipped East from the Rocky Mountains region.

To Cost About $7,000,000

Officials estimated the grapefruit subsidy, paid to processors, would cost about seven million dollars for the season. It was announced only for the portion of the crop processed for civilian consumers. Prices which growers will receive on the noncivilian part of the juice crop have not yet been determined, according to WFA. Cost of the onion transportation subsidy, also paid by CCC, has not been estimated.

The Senate voted to extend the life of CCC until February 29, but the House—on an amendment offered by Representative Kleberg (Democrat)of Texas—changed the date to February 5, forcing the bill back into conference.

Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas, while agreeing to the truce, made a speech on the floor attacking food subsidies generally and the Administration's statistics concerning them particularly.

Using 1926-29 as his base period, rather than 1935-39, Reed produced Bureau of Labor Statistics figures to show food costs have advanced less than anything else in the cost-of-living index except rent.

Two-Thirds Of Owners Sign For Portal Pay

Issue Now, Headed Back to WLB for New Wage Accord

The coal case headed back to the War Labor Board yesterday after two-thirds of the coal industry signed an agreement with the United Mine Workers incorporating benefits granted by Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes for the duration of Government operation of the mines.

Other wage-front developments included:

1. The United States Steel Corp. asked the War Labor Board to deny the petition of the CIO United Steel Workers for an order making any wage adjustment resulting from current negotiations retroactive to January 3, 1944. The steel company stated that it would not be able to make any resultant price increase retroactive. The union is asking a 17-cent-an-hour boost.

2. The Chrysler Corp. rejected demands of the CIO United Automobile Workers for a general wage adjustment outside the limits set by the Little Steel wage formula and accused the union of endeavoring to destroy the "Government's stabilizing policy." R. W. Conder, Chrysler director of public relations, wrote the union that earnings of Chrysler employes have risen 53 per cent since December 15, 1940 (considering overtime) while living costs have risen less than 25 per cent.

$40 Back Pay Involved

The coal wage contract, in addition to extending the portal-to-portal method of payment granted by Ickes, provides a retroactive payment of $40 to each miner. It will be come effective after it receives WLB approval and after the Office of Price Administration grants an additional price adjustment to cover increased costs.

WLB action is expected to be withheld until a special presidential committee reports on a survey

Tragic Combination

Cold Wave Brings Death to 5; Bad Housing Shares Blame

Below-freezing temperatures for the fourth consecutive day brought death to five persons here yesterday, three of them victims of substandard housing.

Two of the dead were Negro infants who died of illness and exposure in badly heated, ill-constructed homes. A third was a 25-year-old Negro woman, fatally burned in a tin-covered wooden shack when her clothing caught fire as she huddled beside a wood stove to keep warm.

Other victims were two men who died in the street from heart attacks brought on by the intense cold.

Deaths of the infants brought a fresh investigation of District housing conditions by both the Police Department and the Washington Housing Association.

"This is just one of the tragedies we have been forecasting," Mrs. Helen D. Hoffman, secretary of the association, declared. "There will be many cases of this sort unless something is done immediately about housing conditions in the Capital."

First of the infant-victims was Edward Brinston Copeland, 14 months, who was found by two policemen alone in his home at 1124 Congress Court ne. Taken to Casualty Hospital the child died en route of pneumonia.

Patrolmen Thomas Howie and J. B. Southard, Ninth Precinct, said Edward's home was made of "paper-thin walls" and that only enough coal to heat a single room by stove was on hand. The officers secured 100 pounds of coal from a neighborhood dealer.

The other child was William N. Brooks, 2 months, likewise found unconscious at his home at 1009 4th st. sw. His death, also at

FTC Alleges Unfair Trade By Kronheim

Liquor Firm Takes Advantage of Short Supply, Complaint By U. S. Charges

Fight Goes On

MOVE TO FORCE more liquor out of storage is revived by Van Nuys. Page 7.

20 Days to Answer

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday charged Milton S. Kronheim & Son, Inc., wholesale liquor dealers reportedly doing a four million dollar business, with resorting to "unfair, coercive and oppressive" practices and gave the firm 20 days in which to reply to the charges.

The firm is the same one which recently paid a penalty of $200,000 to the Office of Price Administration on charges of violating the price-ceiling regulations.

The complaint alleges that the firm is "taking advantage of the present liquor shortage and has put into effect and is enforcing a monopolistic policy of refusing to sell popular brands of whisky, in which it has a monopoly, to District retail stores unless they purchase a stipulated quantity of wines or brandies or both."

It was charged that in many cases the amount of liquors—other than whisky—which the retailers were forced to buy were far in excess of the amount they were able to dispose of through regular business channels.

Brands Controlled

The complaint named the whiskies over which Kronheim had a monopoly as being: Old Crow, Old Granddad, Old Taylor, Old Overholt, Old American, Old Guckenheimer, Mount Vernon, Old 1795, Kronheim's Bond and Sunnybrook.

The complaint further states that: "the respondent's practices are all to the prejudice of its competitors and the public; that they have prevented competition in the sale of alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia; that they have unreasonably restrained trade in the sale of such beverages and have a dangerous tendency to create in the respondent a monopoly in such sale."

Alvin L. Newmyer, attorney for Kronheim, said the charges were vague and "too general" and that the Federal agency would be asked to elaborate on them.

Probe By ABC Board

Another investigation of the firm by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board of the District, is now under way, Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the board announced last night.

Lodge said his board was working with the OPA and the Federal Trade Commission.

The ABC chairman said that if a license holder were convicted of a felony, it would be obligatory for the board to revoke his license and if it was a misdemeanor, revocation was in the discretion of the board.

However, he pointed out, a corporation, in itself, cannot commit either offense, which is purely criminal.

Capital Work

London, Dec. 17 (AP).—Fires which spread black choking smoke through many quarters of Berlin gnawed at Germany's crumbling capital tonight in the wake of the latest RAF assault which stunned Berliners with 1500 long-tons of explosives, including about 20 two-ton bombs.

The strong force of Lancasters that hit the city last night in the sixth major attack since the "Battle of Berlin" began less than a month ago swept over the cloud-covered capital at the earliest hour they have yet attacked the city—shortly before 7 p. m.

30 Fail to Return

Thirty bombers—about average for a mission of its size—failed to return, at least five Nazi fighters were shot down.

The German communique acknowledged that considerable damage had been done the city scarred and blackened by 40 previous raids this year.

The Spandau district, named in reports to neutral capitals as one area particularly well plastered, is the site of the immense Brandenburg Aero-Engine Works as well as other important war industries. Earlier reports to Stockholm said fires were still raging hours after the attack, and that telephone connection with the German capital was irregular.

Government District Hit

The city's governmental district —Germany's nerve center — was also reported to have been hit hard. One report reaching Stockholm said a train loaded with war prisoners was hit, with 60 killed.

The latest raid boosted to 16,000 tons the weight of bombs dumped on the world's most battered city this year.

For last night's attack the four-engined aircraft must have started shortly before nightfall, as most of them had returned by midnight.

Stockholm reports said the dinnertime raid appeared to have caught the city's defenses by surprise for Berliners had only a few short minutes in which to race for shelters.

Unable longer to soothe the shattered nerves of millions of bomb-

Wrights' Plane Kitty Hawk To Be Placed in Smithsonian

"Kitty Hawk," the plane in which Orville Wright made the first power-driven flight 40 years ago yesterday, is coming back to the United States to rest in Smithsonian Institution, President Roosevelt announced last night in a message read at a banquet in honor of the inventor at the Statler Hotel.

The return of the plane from the British Museum in England at last ends one of the great scientific quarrels of this country. Orville Wright and his late brother, Wilbur, let the plane go to England many years ago because Smithsonian refused to recognize their flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C., as the first. Smithsonian credited the first power flight to Samuel Langley.

Among the speakers at the dinner, attended by 1000, were Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, who made the announcement and delivered an address in behalf of the President, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox. Wright did not speak.

He did, however, present the Collier Trophy, awarded annually since 1911 for American aviation achievement, to Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces.

Undersecretary Patterson said this country now has "secret planes in development and in the air whose performance might startle the dream artists of the Sunday supplements."

"There is secret accessory equipment already in use on world battlefronts," he said, "which, if adapted to the needs of peace, will make world-wide commercial plane operation a simple and routine matter."

In recalling some recent miracles of modern aviation, Patterson told of an instance in which general officers of the armed forces recently flew from Hawaii to Washington by transport plane in 20 hours.

The President's message declared that "when the war is won, it will be our obligation to convert to peaceful pursuits the gains in the field of aviation that war has brought.

"The great capitals of the world will, with the dawn of peace, be as

Russians Gain In Northern Drive, Foe Says

But Soviet Is Silent On Nazi Reports Of Huge Battles

London, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Russians today reported "improved positions" in the industrial Kirovograd area of the southern Ukraine in an unusually terse communique limited to this front, but voluminous German accounts of widespread fighting in the north said the Red army had gained ground in a five-day-old offensive around Nevel.

The Moscow communique took only a few words to say that German counterattacks near Kirovograd were repulsed and other fronts were reduced to reconnaissance and artillery activity. Forty-two tanks and 17 planes were brought down during the day.

But Berlin reported terrific battles in White Russia, which, if they are on the scale described by the Germans, are as important as any the Russian front has seen in months—operations which may be the beginning of a Soviet winter offensive.

Claim Drive Near Latvia

The German reports indicated that the most important of the northern drives was a Russian attack under Gen. Andrei I. Yeremenko which began Monday south of Nevel—about 70 miles from the Latvian border.

Today, the Germans said, the Russians extended the attacks to west and northwest of Nevel, throwing in additional heavy tank forces. Previous German reports said Yeremenko was using about 60,000 infantrymen and three tank brigades in this fighting.

Berlin said that in the last 24 hours south of Nevel 51 Russian tanks were destroyed in one sector alone.

It Would Have Been 'Pretty Big Haul,' President Observes

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday that, during the Big Three conference in Teheran, Marshal Stalin warned him of a German plot and persuaded him to move into the walled Russian Embassy.

Mr. Roosevelt didn't give any details about the plot. He did say, though, that he presumed that there were hundreds of German spies in Teheran. And he observed, with a chuckle, that it would have been a pretty big haul if they could have got all three leaders—himself, Churchill and Stalin—at once.

The President, tanned, weather-beaten and once more up to his ears in work, held his press conference seven hours after getting back from his 25,000-mile journey overseas. He brought up the plot story while talking about the measures taken to guard him. If he had his way, he said, he would have liked to give out the news about where he was going; but the matter of security had to be considered.

In Range of Enemy

For example, he said, the route he took in flying to Teheran was within range of German fighter planes. A big transport, he said, would be like a sitting duck for a fighter plane.

Then the President told about arriving in Teheran and about taking up his residence in the American Embassy, which is about a mile from the Russian Embassy.

That night, he said, he got word from Marshal Stalin about a German plot. Stalin and the others, he said, seemed to be upset about it, and the Russian leader pleaded with him to move to the Russian Embassy.

Mr. Roosevelt accepted the invitation, since in this way he and the others could avoid making trips through the streets to get together.

Prime Minister Churchill, the President explained, was nearby.

Roosevelt Hits Law Delaying Father Draft as a Pious Hope

By Ben W. Gilbert

President Roosevelt yesterday hailed management of the Selective Service system under the control of Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt as good administration, simultaneously deriding the measure passed by Congress to delay the father draft as the expression of a pious hope which had the effect of ordering poor administration.

The measure actually failed to forbid the induction of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, but did forbid the President to delegate power over Selective Service to anyone but Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey.

Passage of the measure was generally regarded as a rebuke to McNutt and some quarters reported that he would resign since the President signed it.

The President said that he signed the measure because there was no harm in indorsing a pious hope, but added that an attempt was being made to work out an executive order separating the two agencies but establishing a liaison between them retaining the excellent working relationship that has existed.

The Chief Executive said he would send a message to Congress concerning provisions of the law.

Section after section, he said, contained clauses which said in effect: Fathers should go to the bottom of the list unless the President says that they should be drafted otherwise.

What kind of legislation is that, he asked.

The President explained that the Nation had good administration of the Nation's manpower with Selective Service and the War Manpower Commission working together. Now Congress, in its wisdom, tells the

First Round Won

General MacArthur's Headquarters (Saturday), Dec. 18 (AP).—Alert American planes, providing all-important protection for ground forces securing the invasion beachhead on New Britain, have broken up repeated enemy air attacks, shooting down nine bombers and five fighters, it was announced today.

Ready for the expected retaliatory air blows, which quickly followed the smoothly won position Wednesday at Arawe on the southwest coast, these vigilant patrols took on the invaders in a constant series of sky battles. Three other raiders probably were downed. No mention was made of Allied air losses.

Beneath this effective air umbrella, the peninsula, which was taken at a low cost in lives, was strengthened against any counter move.

Today's communique made clear that every position seized has been retained, saying "territory won in our landing operations is being consolidated by our ground forces" —units of the Sixth U. S. Army.

Jap Positions Plastered

At the same time, the American fighters were turning back the Japanese air force before Arawe. Liberators were making two heavy assaults with 232 tons of explosives on Japanese positions some 85 miles northwest at Cape Gloucester. That position, nearest to the New Guinea coast from which the invasion of New Britain was made, now has taken a pounding by more than 1100 tons of bombs since late in November.

Three times during Thursday afternoon American fighter patrols made contact with flights of enemy bombers and fighters. In the first an outnumbered formation of P-38s intercepted 7 to 9 bombers, with 20 to 30 Zeros near Borgen Bay, which is across the island. Three of these bombers were shot down and another listed as a probable.

More Enemy Planes Destroyed

An hour later a stronger flight of P-38s met two sets of enemy aircraft—2 bombers, a fighter, then 6 or 7 bombers and 15 to 20 fighters. Five bombers and two fighters were downed.

Late in the afternoon P-47s bagged one dive bomber and three fighters out of another strong formation.

In all these combats our fighters came through without loss or even a report of damage.

Westward across narrow waters from New Britain on New Guinea's Huon Peninsula, Australians moved into the coastal supply village of Lakona, 14 miles north of Finschhafen.

Tanks were employed to drive the enemy out of his holdings while

General Defends Tarawa Planning

For 374 Total

U.S. Subs Sink 8 Additional Jap Ships

By the Associated Press

Eight more of the cargo ships which Japan needs so badly to keep her swollen empire a going concern have been sunk by United States submarines.

This was reported yesterday by the Navy in a brief communique which brought the score of our submarines in the Pacific to: Japanese ships sunk 374, probably sunk 36, and damaged 114, a grand total of 524 as against the announced loss of 15 subs.

The newest victims of the far-ranging undersea craft are two large transports, two large tankers, three medium freighters and one small freighter.

Whether the transports were carrying troops to Japanese outposts now increasingly threatened was not indicated.

Having nothing like America's shipbuilding capacity, the Japanese can ill afford to lose even the smallest freighter used in carrying supplies to outlying garrisons or bringing loot back home.

(Informed Dutch sources here recently reported that the Japanese are so short of shipping they have abandoned their "coprosperity" talk so far as it affects the East Indies and urged those peoples to achieve a self-supporting status.)

It is possible that some of the recent submarine successes were scored by raiders based on newly-won Gilbert Island atolls. The possession of these bases brought the already powerful American submarine forces hundreds of miles closer to the Japanese sea lanes and thus made possible much faster "round trips" of destruction.

Vandegrift Also Warns of Heavy Losses to Come

The Senate Naval Committee received assurance from Lieut. Gen. A. A. Vandegrift, commandant of the Marine Corps, yesterday that the Tarawa attack was "well planned and skillfully executed" together with a blunt warning that losses in such attacks in the future also will be heavy.

Tarawa, bloodiest fight in Marine Corps history, cost the American vistors 1026 dead and 2557 wounded in 72 hours of battle.

Vandegrift wrote to Chairman Walsh (Democrat) Massachusetts, of the Naval Committee in response to an inquiry as to why losses were so heavy. After discussing the difficulties of the operation and grimly commenting that "there are no foxholes off shore" for the men who storm beaches, Vandegrift added:

"No one regrets the losses in such an attack more than does the Marine Corps itself. No one realizes more than does the Marine Corps that there is no royal road to Tokyo. We must steel our people to the same realization."

Vandegrift's statement is in line with the conviction of other officers whose duty it is to calculate prospective casualties. They consider that the war is now past the period when victories can be won at low cost.

The reason is that the war in Europe and the Pacific has now moved into zones which the enemy must defend bitterly and which can be taken only by frontal assault.

Vandegrift told Walsh it was necessary to distinguish between an attack on a large land mass and a small island such as Tarawa. In the former case, he said, the enemy, unable to defend all beaches strongly, must defend all lightly while holding his major strength in a central reserve ready to be thrown against any point of major attack.

Grant Affair Parallel Seen In Patton Case

By International News Service

An authoritative source yesterday compared the Patton incident to the problem that confronted President Lincoln in the Civil War when he finally chose Ulysses S. Grant as commander in chief of the Union forces after several previous generals had failed.

Lincoln, it was recalled, had been asked by a horrified temperance friend what he meant by picking a man who drank to lead the Army.

Lincoln, according to the version of the story related in connection with Patton, retorted that Grant must drink a pretty good brand of liquor.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt closed the Patton incident as far as he is concerned at his news conference late yesterday.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., had created a storm of controversy in the United States last month when it was disclosed he had angrily slapped one shell-shocked soldier in a Sicilian hospital and upbraided another.

His recall as active commander of the Seventh Army was demanded in many quarters and only recently his promotion from a permanent colonelcy to that of major general was held up by the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

In reply to a question as to whether he had seen Patton, the President replied that he had. He said he had also seen Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark, commander of the Fifth Army in Italy.

Balkan Invasion Talk

London, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Ankara radio, quoting Turkish press reports, predicted today that Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.'s American Seventh Army will strike soon in a Balkan invasion it said had been presaged by recent concentrated Allied bombings of Balkan bases.

"Big Allied invasion armies in Britain, Corsica, Sicily and other countries are ready for action, and it appears the Allies are making large-scale preparations for launching an invasion," the radio said.

"Great numbers of landing barges are reported to have been concentrated in Sicilian ports.

"Patton's journey to Cairo created great interest and it is reported the Seventh U. S. Army which still is in Sicily will take part in the invasion of the Balkans."

French Troops Score Gains On Italian Front

By Edward Kennedy

Algiers, Dec. 17 (AP).—For the first time since November 11, 1918, troops of the four great Allies of the first World War—America, Britain, France and Italy—are fighting side by side against the Germans, in the rugged mountains of Italy.

Splendidly equipped with the most modern American weapons, crack French units trained in North Africa have been in the battle line for some time and have scored outstanding successes, capturing several important Nazi hill positions and seizing prisoners, the Allied command announced today.

This first appearance of French troops in European mainland fighting since the fall of their homeland in 1940 created a sensation among the Italian people.

The quick, incisive successes scored by the highly mobile French striking force contrasted sharply with the debacle suffered recently by Italian militia in its first offensive gesture in the Mignano area. The French, however, are much more highly equipped and trained than their new Italian allies.

Since they fought alongside the Americans and British in Tunisia, Gen. Henri Giraud's men have learned to use the best American light and heavy machine guns, tanks and tank destroyers and mobile field artillery. Their officers declare they will prove invaluable as the drive toward Rome continues. Their uniforms differ but slightly from those of the Americans.

"Just give us a chance on equal terms," a French soldier said. "If you thought we were good in Tunisia, just watch us now."

Announcement of the presence of the French in Italy came as the Nazis intensified their efforts to check the relentless advance of the Eighth Army along the Adriatic coast. Besides bringing mountain troops from Russia, the enemy threw more and more tanks and flame-throwers into the struggle.

Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army captured more important hill positions and beat back a German counterattack west of Venafro.

In Military Sense

Still Far From Rome, Writer Says

By Wes Gallagher

Algiers, Dec. 17 (AP).—After 106 days of bloody fighting since the first Allied troops set foot on Italy, Rome is still far away, in a military sense with little prospect that it will be liberated soon.

Despite slow progress, I am convinced the campaign has been worth the cost, for the tremendous air bases on the mainland alone. These air bases are by far the most important single asset which the more than three months of war has brought.

The Allied attack has gone much more slowly than had been expected, and there is little chance that it can be speeded up. This slow progress has been largely attributed to terrain and weather, which played a part, but the following factors have played as large a role, if not larger:

1. The Italian surrender has produced far less in a military sense than had first been hoped for. Italian guerilla activity and sabotage has been negligible, and the Italian armed forces have not yet proved of any great value, especially on land.

2. This Mediterranean theater does not enjoy the favored position that it did last winter in the matter of supplies and troops and is competing in priorities with other theaters which figure higher in Allied plans.

3. Militarily there is little value outside of prestige in capturing Rome and it would not be worth the tremendous infantry casualties necessary to bring the campaign to a quick end.

Criticism has been offered that the Allies tried to conduct the Italian invasion on a shoestring. The military reason for this will be buried until after the war.

In short, the Italian campaign has been fitted into global strategy laid down by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt and their staffs. It was apparently the majority opinion that no fighting could be decisive.

Nazis Handed Bad Setback, Tito Claims

London, Dec. 17 (AP).—A widespread German defeat in the battle of the Balkans was proclaimed today by Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), leader of the Yugoslav Partisan Army, in two communiques.

Tito said that on the Yugoslav battle line the major offensive of Marshal Erwin Rommel was being halted or broken everywhere and his communications crippled by the ripping up of hundreds of miles of rail lines at his rear.

These most optimistic bulletins to come from Tito's hidden headquarters since Hitler began his attempts to knock out the threat to his whole position in southeastern Europe were accompanied by the acknowledgment of a Berlin spokesman that the whole of the western Balkans was "in an uproar" and that fighting against the Nazis again had erupted in Albania.

Ever since the Nazis sprang forward nearly two weeks ago in the heaviest offensive yet thrown against Yugoslav Partisans, Tito's announcements have been restrained and somewhat gloomy and noted an endless stream of German reserves pouring into the country.

But today in a special communique which followed earlier declarations of significant Yugoslav victories he declared "the big German offensive against liberated territory is not developing along the lines the enemy expected. From all fronts news is arriving about defeat of the enemy . . ."

Then front by front he detailed a sharp turn in the fortunes of a war which now is widely believed to be pinning down as heavy a German force as is being engaged by the Allies in Italy.

The Yugoslavs again were supported by the Allied air attacks against German communications in the eastern Adriatic and by the steady offensive of Allied naval patrol bombers from the Mediterranean command which smashed at enemy transport in the Sibenik-Dubrovnik area of Yugoslovia.

Belgian-British Link

London, Dec. 17 (AP).—A spokesman for the Belgian Ministry of Information has hinted that Belgium might become a member of the British Commonwealth under certain conditions, the London Daily Sketch said today.

dazed Germans with talk of an impending revenge on England, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels again admitted at a meeting of his propaganda chieftains that the relentless bombing of Germany was causing more anxiety than the Russian campaign or threats of invasion.

Virtually admitting the Nazi inability to stem the growing attacks through Hitler's roofless European fortress, Goebbels declared in a speech later broadcast by the Berlin radio:

"In principle, the problems presented by the Russian campaign and the invasion were solved in advance. The bombings cause much greater anxiety."

Emphasizing this implied admission of Germany's aerial defense weakness was the success of the night attack.

The Germans put up fighters all along the route, but ground defenses were forced to work blind because of the heavy cloud formations over which the RAF operated and could do no more than throw up a wild and heavy barrage to keep the raiders high. Rocket-gunned fighters, the night counterpart of the new weapon used against American day raiders, were reported to have attacked the RAF bombers for the first time.

A Swedish businessman who was a witness to last night's bombing said the Lehrte railway station, one of the city's five terminals, the Hallesche Tor area at the foot of Friedrichstrasse and a number of buildings along the Unter Den Linden, Berlin's main thoroughfare, were badly damaged.

Battle of Changteh Called Pivotal Success by Chinese

Field Headquarters in Northern Hunan, Dec. 16 (Delayed), (AP).—Gen. Hsueh Yuen, Governor of Hunan and commander of this war area, said today that the Battle of Changteh, while it cost 14,000 Chinese casualties against 11,000 for the Japanese, was a pivotal success for the whole strategy of the United Nations in the Pacific region.

The general spoke with visiting correspondents through Lieut. Gen. Chao Tseli, his chief of staff.

Both generals emphasized the strategic importance of the battle for the north Hunan city, which is the military gateway west of Tungting Lake and northwest of Changsha.

General Hsueh and his chief of staff indicated their firm belief that the Japanese began the offensive, not merely to loot the warehouses of the new rice crop, but actually in the hope of breaking through to Changsha.

Significance of Battle

Hsueh and Chao said full exploitation of such a break-through would mean dissection of free China, the loss of her main rail system and a vast impairment of her use as a future base of attack on Japan, even if Chinese resistance continued.

The urgency of the Japanese strategy was indicated by their use of tear and suffocating gas, according to General Chao. He said the chemical nature of the suffocating gas is not yet known owing to the lack of immediate laboratory facilities but he indicated it is used to incapacitate troops rather than to kill them.

Hsueh declared the Japanese engaged in rapine and wanton killing of women and children, plundering, and incendiarism at Changteh and elsewhere, treating civilians "like beasts."

Japs Retreat in Rice Bowl

Chungking, Dec. 17 (AP).—Japanese forces south of the Lin River, which twists eastward into Tungting Lake to split the Chinese rice bowl in half, were retiring under pressure at the rate of 9½ miles a day, Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, American-trained Chinese Army spokesman, asserted at a press conference today.

Tseng predicted that the Japanese wouold soon be cleared from the area south of the Lin River, thus restoring to China at least half of her rice bowl.

A communique said that fierce fighting still was raging on the outskirts of Ansien and Nanhsien, two important towns north of Tungting Lake and that the Japanese had staged a counterattack from their base at Lihsien.

artillery fire and infantry weapons took a heavy toll of Japanese seeking to escape across the Sanga River.

In other Allied air strikes, Liberators made a round-trip flight of more than 2500 miles from Australia to bomb Japanese oil refineries at Balikpapan, on Borneo; two enemy tankers were hit and one of 2000 tons was sunk by a 1000-pound bomb near Hermit Island, 120 miles northeast of Wewak, New Guinea; Australian-flown Beaufighters sank a 4000-ton transport Thursday off Timor; and 24 supply barges were destroyed on damaged off New Britain and New Guinea.

Collier Believed Lost; 44 Aboard

Boston, Dec. 17 (AP).—The Boston collier Suffolk is believed lost off Block Island in a gale with her merchant crew of 38 and a Navy gun crew of six men.

The collier reportedly radioed last Saturday that she was caught in a bad gale and was sinking.

Germans Reported Admitting Atrocities

Officers Tell Kharkov Atrocity Tribunal Of Executions, Soviet Newspapers Say

By Eddy Gilmore

Moscow, Dec. 17 (AP).—Moscow newspapers today told how a German Gestapo captain and a Nazi storm trooper commander, under trial for murder by a Kharkov court, openly admitted executions of Russian civilians and war prisoners, explaining they were only carrying out orders.

The trials, in which a group of Germans and one Russian traitor are the defendants, are the first since the Moscow pledge by Russia, Britain and the United States on November 1 that war criminals would be returned to the scene of their crimes and tried under local law.

(Moscow radio, recorded in London, said Nazi leaders and the German high command was responsible for war crimes and would be "unearthed from wherever they seek refuge, from even the remotest corners of the world."

("They will answer with their heads for all their crimes," the broadcast said.)

Newspapers here devoted two of their four pages to detailed testimony. Three Russian attorneys represented the accused.

Saw 3000 Mowed Down

Moscow newspapers gave these accounts of the trial:

Hans Ritz, commander of a storm troop company, participated in the forceful evacuation of civilians and took part in executions. His work was chiefly punitive, he testified.

Ritz said he was responsible for falsifying documents which led to executions. In Taganrog alone, he said, he was responsible for the death documents of about 300 persons. Later he was transferred to Kharkov and witnessed the killing of about 3000 persons in a nearby village.

His commander, he related, stood with him watching the tommy gunners mow down civilians and said, "Shoow me that you, too, know how." Ritz then took his tommy gun and fired into the screaming ranks of people.

"How does a man like you, with high legal education, induce himself to take part in such atrocities?" asked the prosecutor.

"I had to fulfill my orders, otherwise I would have been tried myself," he answered.

"But you admit you volunteered to take part in some of these atrocities?"

Wanted Experience

"I was a new man on the Eastern Front. I wanted to see how everything worked."

Ritz was asked if he thought international laws had been observed by the Germans on the Eastern Front.

"I must say there was no question of international law," Ritz told the court. "Adolf Hitler was the man responsible for the reign of cruelty in the Soviet Union." He then added that Heinrich Himmler, head of the Gestapo, had issued orders to "execute according to one's own Aryan feelings."

Another defendant, Capt. William Langheld, 52, of the Gestapo, was described as well-fed, long-faced and pink-cheeked with long, heavy eyelids.

He said he personally killed "about 100" Soviet citizens and estimated that about 30,000 were killed by the Germans in Kharkov and Kharkov Province, with an equal number in Kiev. About 15,000 were killed in Poltava.

He admitted that five women were executed in one morning.

"And what happened to the sixth woman—the mother with the child?" the prosecutor asked.

"She died during a beating."

"And her child?"

"The child began wailing and screaming and finally a corporal killed it."

Langheld related how gas truck death chambers worked and said he had seen them functioning with Russians inside clawing at the windows as they met death.

Washingtonian In Rail Wreck

LOU N. SMALL
Tells of Buie Wreck

Four Return To D.C. Aboard 'Mercy' Train

By Emily Towe

Four Washingtonians, shock-worn survivors of the Atlantic Coast Line streamliners' wreck near Lumberton, N. C., were among the scores who arrived here at 4:30 p. m. yesterday on a 14-car special train, with eyewitness accounts "so gruesome that we only hope that time will wipe away the horrible memories."

Stretchers and wheelchairs were lined up a full hour ahead of time along track 24 at Union Station before the survivors were lifted from the cars or those with minor injuries descended with eyes haunted by the tragic experiences through which they had passed. Red Cross ambulances were parked outside the station.

Willia C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Russia and France and more recently a special representative of President Roosevelt, stepped down from the train with his beautiful 19-year-old daughter, Anne. Though they were both "shaken up pretty badly" and Mr. Bullitt suffered head bruises they insisted that their injuries were minor in comparison with the death and tragedy surrounding them in the ill-fated train.

"I was bumped about a bit in the compartment but medical attention won't be necessary," Mr. Bullitt declared. "One woman in our car was killed but the worst part of the wreck was farther on in the train." They were returning here after a two-week visit at Hobe Sound, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou N. Small, 2480 16th st. nw., who were returning to their Washington home after a two-week vacation in Palm Beach, were so eager to tell of the heroism of a Navy medical officer that they were reluctant to speak of Small's critical health for which he underwent two operations in October.

As he was pushed through Union Station in a wheel chair, the haggard-faced Washingtonian, head of a public relations firm here which bears his name, declared: "Commander M. W. Arnold, a Navy medical officer, is the real hero of the accident. With no supplies except the scanty little first-aid kits on the pullmans, he ministered to the injured and dying."

Small's tribute to the commander, who later confessed with a chuckle that he lost his trousers in the early morning accident and had to rush about with a raincoat over his underwear, was echoed by survivors who descended the entire length of the train.

Mrs. Small, a vivacious, auburn-haired woman who solicitiously hovered over her convalescing husband, gave her version of the accident:

"We were sleeping in a drawing room when suddenly I was thrown off the long seat. My husband, who had been too ill to go to the diner for meals, was thrown into the air and then crashed to the floor. Our car was not derailed but the serious damage was about two cars farther on the train."

Grace Moore, opera star was reported on the train yesterday en route to New York from Miami. In a wire yesterday from Richmond, Va., where the rescue train stopped briefly before continuing to Washington, Miss Moore said: "Thank God, I have only a sprained back and neck. Will be there Sunday to sing with the National Symphony Orchestra." Her message was addressed to Hans Kindler, conductor of the orchestra.

Mrs. A. J. Roos of Canton, Ohio, was suffering most as she was lifted groaning onto her stretcher by Commander Arnold, who not only ministered to victims immediately after the accident but continued his vigilance as the rescue train pushed northward yesterday. The injured woman was met at the station by her husband, president of Diebold, Inc., in Canton, and taken to a local hospital.

bound Tamiami East Coast Champion smashed into these coaches which had fallen over upon the northbound double track.

In a statement today, he said the road's information was that the fireman of the southbound train went ahead after the first wreck to flag the northbound streamliner, carrying with him a fuse and a red lantern. While making his way through the icy night, the statement said, the fireman fell and broke his fuse, but continued his effort to stop the other thain by using his lantern.

"The engineer on No. 8 (the northbound train) evidently did not see the fireman's signal," said Sibley's statement. "We understand that the sleet and snowstorm was still in progress at that time."

Railroad souces said they believed only one passenger on the southbound train met death. All other victims, Coast Line spokesman said, were apparently on the northbound train.

Railroad wrecking cranes at the scene were taxed to capacity in pulling away at the four steel cars, crushed together so tightly that the entire four occupied no more space than one of them in good condition would occupy.

munique reported "heavy defensive fighting continued throughout the whole day."

In the area around the rail junction of Zhlobin, west of Gomel, where the Germans said the Russians began an attack last Wednesday with 100,000 troops and two tank brigades, Berlin broadcasts admitted "the Soviets succeeded in making a deep indentation." The Germans then said they counter-[illegible] and restored their lines, [illegible]y annihilating" a Soviet at-[illegible] force.

[illegible] Repelled, Nazis Said

A third Russian attack in White [illegible]ia, which the Germans said [illegible]n Thursday west of Krichev, [illegible]inued for the second day with [illegible] attack under cover of artificial [illegible] the Germans said, but was re-[illegible]sed.

In addition, the Germans hinted at a new development in the north—growing activity around Leningrad where the front has been dormant for many months.

"On the Leningrad front fights became somewhat livelier without exceeding their local character," Berlin said. "The Soviets attempted to attack the German front. They temporarily succeeded in making indentations on some points but these were rectified in counterattacks."

One Moscow radio report said the Germans were observed burning villages in the rear of their Leningrad positions, as though preparing to leave the area, but continued their shelling of the city.

Neither Berlin nor Moscow communiques mentioned the fighting in the Kiev bulge, where the Germans have been attacking the Russians installed on the Teterev River line some 55 miles west of Kiev. Earlier Moscow dispatches said the fighting was still critical and while the Red army yesterday halted another big push of German armor, the climax was still to be reached.

MPs Officious At Crash Scene

Lumberton, N. C., Dec. 17 (AP).—Two newspapermen and an official Red Cross disaster reporter were abruptly prevented by military police from securing news and pictures of the train wreck near here and the Red Cross man had his camera seized and film thrown into a fire.

The Red Cross reporter, it was learned from an authoritative source, had permission from a public relations lieutenant to make pictures of the disaster, but shortly was halted by an M. P. who took his camera, removed the film and threw it into a fire near the wreck. The reporter was making official scenes for Red Cross records.

The Office of Censorship in Washington said members of its staff there intervened promptly when told of the interference by military police.

British Officer's Wife Reports Loss Of Ancient Ring

A 300-year-old ring, valued more for sentiment than for cost, was reported lost Thursday night by Mrs. Lucinda Verney, employed by the British Government, who told police yesterday she thought she had left it in the ladies' room at the Hotel Statler.

The ring, having a red stone mounting surrounded with 12 uncut diamonds, was given to her by her husband, Capt. John Verney, as an engagement ring in London in 1939.

Mrs. Verney, who lives at 1316 35th st. nw., said that her husband, an officer in the British Army, is now a prisoner of war in Germany. She said that she has not seen him since he entered the service four years ago.

Roosevelt Tells Of Nazi Plot to Get 'Big Three'

only a wall separating the British Embassy and the Russian Embassy.

In Midst of Spies

Here the President made his observation about there being hundreds of German spies in Teheran and about the good haul they might have got in that old Persian city.

In this connection an Associated Press dispatch from Teheran on December 6 said Nazi agents were dropped by parachute among the tribes before the meeting of the Big Three got under way. Most of these, the dispatch said, had been captured and "no gap was left in the cordon of protection thrown about the city."

President Roosevelt, though his office was jammed with reporters, appeared to be holding back material for the world broadcast he is to make on Christmas Eve.

He announced that he would deliver this from Hyde Park at 3 p. m. on that day, and he explained that it would be addressed primarily to the men in our armed forces.

Parleys Successful

The President, speaking of the conferences at Cairo and Teheran, said they were a success in every way. They were a success, he said, not only from the standpoint of the conduct of the war, but from the standpoint of preventing another war in our generation after this one is won.

"Did you work out any plans for the defeat of Germany in 1944?" a reporter asked.

The President said that they were not setting any dates. But, he added, the three countries, the United States, Britain and Russia, were all working to beat Germany as fast as they can.

Another reporter asked about the report that Gen. George C. Marshall is going to London to direct the Anglo-American "second front" army. The President declined to answer.

Stalin a Realist

The President was asked if Marshal Stalin shared his hope to avoid further wars in this generation. Very definitely, he replied, and he added that the United Nations are prepared to back up this hope.

A girl reporter asked Mr. Roosevelt about Marshal Stalin. What type was he.

The President laughed and said that he and Stalin had something in common. The Russian leader, he said, was a realist.

He paid tribute to both Stalin and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and said he had some excellent talks with them. The get-together, he thought, would make for good relations in the future.

Seabees Remember Pearl Harbor, Buy $551,825 Bonds

Williamsburg, Va., Dec. 17 (AP).—Camp Peary's Seabees remembered Pearl Harbor Day, December 7, by purchasing $551,825 in war bonds final tabulations released today by Comdr. J. M. Leiber (SC), USN, War Bond chairman, disclosed.

"Although 97 per cent of the personnel is signed for monthly bond reductions, the goal of half a million dollars was passed with the same display of 'can do' drive that has brought world fame to the Navy's fighting builders," Commander Leiber said.

"Many of the camp departments knocked their quotas into cocked hats, exceeding them by double, triple and in one case seven times the cash expected," the officer related.

For similar displays of willingness to lend Uncle Sam their cash, Camp Peary's Seabees now hold the first "Commandant's Pennant" ever awarded to military personnel for War Bond excellence.

House Group Ends Hearings On Bill to Raise Rail Wages

By Robert C. Albright

With hopes pinned on a weekend White House settlement of the rail wage dispute, the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday concluded hearing on the Truman-Crosser railroad pay resolution but staved off a vote until Monday.

The postponement came in the face of nonoperating brotherhood demands for "quick action." Plainly anxious to avoid a legislative showdown on a delicate inflation issue, the committee was nonetheless set to approve an 8-cent hourly pay increase for 1,097,000 nonoperating rail employes on Monday, if the President fails to act in the meanwhile.

Whether a retarded report could reach the floor before the holiday recess was even more speculative than the prospect of a weekend adjustment of the volatile pay differences, now scheduled to boil over in a Nation-wide strike of operating brotherhoods on a related pay issue December 30.

Before the House committee yesterday, both War Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, opposed to the increase as a blow at his wage-price line, and nonoperating union representatives, demanding the across-the-board raise, refused to budge an inch.

George Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, told the committee there was "nothing doing" on a settlement. Later he told newsmen: "This thing has gone far beyond compromise. An 8-cent increase is the only basis we can accept."

Similarly, Vinson indicated he was unwilling to go beyond the 4 to 10-cent sliding scale of hourly increases he had previously approved: "Only by adhering to our standards can we minimize the damages of runaway inflation."

But return of the President spurred the committee's hopes that the issue can be settled "administratively" without putting the House on the hottest political spot of the year. If forced to a vote, the committee is expected to vote for the increase and the House probably will approve it as well. The Senate passed the resolution, 74 to 4.

Members urged Vinson to "take one more try" at a compromise. Committeemen said privately they were advised the war stabilizer will confer with the President within the next 24 hours. At his White House press conference the President was asked a general question on the rail dispute and said he was coming to that later on.

Union Viewpoint

Meanwhile, Donald Richberg, counsel for the 15 nonoperating brotherhoods; B. M. Jewell, spokesmen for the group, and Harrison followed Vinson before the committee to hammer home brotherhood arguments that the increase is noninflationary and is lawfully due the men under the Railway Labor Act.

"I can't possibly help but think these arguments of yours might better be addressed to the President rather than to Congress," said Representative Charles A. Halleck (Republican) of Indiana, at one point.

Representative Oren Harris (Democrat) of Arkansas told Richberg he thought it would be much better to draft an amendment to the price control act "to accommodate what is sought here."

George Harrison, last brotherhood witness, helped to consolidate support for the bill in an apparently wavering committee. Harrison told of eight separate talks with the President during the long course of the dispute, said the President had twice urged the men to accept the 8-cent increase, and had expressed "surprise" at Vinson's action in setting aside the 8-cent agreement.

"We've had the cat in the bag many times, but it got out of the bag every time we got it in there," he told the committee.

Harrison said railroad wages were far below the industrial average before the Stabilization Act was signed, but at one White House conference he was given to understand the act was flexible enough to accommodate their demands.

"They pulled the gong and started the race before he got to the post," said Harrison. 'That's the reason we can't catch up. They have no handicap on our horse."

He pressed for speed: "I'm afraid you're going to fiddle around here until Rome burns up."

But at the executive session following the hearings, the committee was in no hurry. Representative Robert Crosser (Democrat) of Ohio, made a futile plea for an immediate vote, but action went over until Monday.

accessible by air as any point in the United States is now by rail. Experiments which would have required decades will have been accomplished in a few years, and, if we will, we can use all these advances for a lasting peace. God willing, we will."

Early Days Recalled

Secretary Knox recalled that during the First World War there were 38 pilots and 239 men attached to the naval aviation force, but that "today we talk in terms of more than 27,000 planes in the Navy."

Tseng Yang Fu, Chinese Minister of Communications, said "China is particularly appreciative of the tremendous utility of the airplane, especially when her coast and land communications are almost entirely blockaded or cut from the outside world."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, British Secretary of State for Air, said superior air power "is enabling the United Nations to stamp out tyranny and oppression, but already we can look beyond victory and see the immense part which aviation is destined to play in the world of tomorrow."

Additional tribute was paid to the Wright brothers in a message from the Russian government.

Operators Sign Portal Pay Pact

of underground travel time in the coal industry—now expected about January 15.

Heavy Production

The agreement, negotiated by a subcommittee, was accepted by Northern, Western and Alabama operators at a conference yesterday after Ickes announced that 12,975,000 tons of soft coal—a 16-year record—were produced last week. He estimated that the rate per miner was 38 tons, and the United Mine Workers said this figure meant that miners have increased their daily output by 1.15 to 1.20 tons a day under the agreement between Ickes and Lewis.

The Southern Coal Producers Association, headed by Edward R. Burke, former Nebraska Senator, became the lone important holdout when the Alabama group signed.

Burke made a statement to the operator-union conference saying that if the WLB approves the contract and if additional price increases are granted, "it may be that our members would then feel that they would have no further freedom in the matter and would be constrained to go along with the rest of the industry which has already surrendered to superior force." Burke has expressed doubt that the WLB would approve the contract in its present form.

Bad Housing, Cold Brings Death to Five

Casualty Hospital, was charged to malnutrition and exposure by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Detective Sergt. W. D. Perry, homicide squad, said "I could practically see through the walls of the house. I could almost put my hand through the cracks around the windows."

The Copeland case brought an indication from police of an investigation of the family's living conditions.

Capt. Rhoda Millekin, chief of the Women's Bureau, said a private welfare agency had tried to help the family. The father, a laborer, has sufficient money to pay for adequate housing, she said, but is unable to find such quarters because he resided here before 1941 and is not an essential worker.

Annabelle Smith, Negro, 25, was burned to death in a one-story tin-covered wooden shack at 1122 19th st. nw. last night.

Police reported her clothing ignited as she sought the meager warmth of a small wood stove.

Other victims of the cold were William Harvey of Norfolk, Va., who died at Gallinger Hospital, and John Dixon, 48, no fixed address, who died at Emergency Hospital. Both men were picked up off the street by police and died of heart attacks induced by exposure.

Twelve-year-old William Roundtree of 337 Elm st. nw., suffered minor burns and the interior of the apartment was virtually destroyed by fire from a kerosene stove last night.

In the meantime, the Weather Bureau forecasts warmer weather for the city today following a comparative mild day yesterday. From a low of 16 at 6:45 a. m. the temperature rose to 35 at 5 p. m. Today the thermometer is expected to jump to about 40.

Ten employes of the hospital permit office of the Board of Public Welfare were dismissed yesterday because of inadequate heating on the first floor of their offices at 472 Indiana ave. nw.

The slacking off of sub-freezing weather eased temporarily the threatened shortage of heating and cooking gas in this area. Low temperatures during the week in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio, sources of natural gas piped to Washington, caused the gas to freeze in the pipe lines.

Ice Skating Good At Three Locations

Roosevelt Hits Draft Delay Law

two agencies not to work together, he said.

Technically, authority over Selective Service is now held only by President Roosevelt since he is still to redelegate it to Hershey.

Several suggested methods of providing for liaison between the two agencies have been developed by the agencies concerned.

One plan would provide for a simple delegation of authority over Selective Service to Hershey, relying on executive orders already on the books to empower McNutt to advise Hershey on occupational deferment questions.

Another plan would be to reaffirm existing orders in such a way as to make it clear that McNutt's orders on occupational deferment questions must prevail.

Still another plan would keep the Selective Service system within the War Manpower Commission for administrative purposes, although delegating draft authority to Hershey directly.

Some consideration is being given to keeping the agencies separate, but giving War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes the job of settling disputes between the two. McNutt was said to oppose this suggestion on the ground that the previous relationship minimized conflict by maintaining close day-to-day working relations.

Fight to Free Stored Liquor Not Dropped

By the Associated Press

The chairman of the Senate's liquor-shortage inquiry revived last night the plan to force stored liquor on the market through taxes, despite its one-sided rejection by the Finance Committee.

SAMUEL EIG

There will be a campaign on the Senate floor, said Senator Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana to add the proposal to the pending revenue bill when this measure comes up for debate early next month.

The proposed amendment, reducing from eight to five years the length of time during which aging liquor may be held in Government-bonded warehouses free of taxes was rejected by the Finance Committee yesterday on a 17-2 vote.

Chairman George (Democrat) of Georgia has estimated that the amendment would force 117,000,000 gallons of whisky out of storage. It would make these gallons immediately subject to tax—$9 a gallon in the new revenue bill.

Tight Grain Situation

Upson's picture of the grain outlook struck a serious blow at Van Nuys' hopes for bolstering dwindling liquor reserves by "a holiday" from industrial alcohol making to permit distilleries to manufacture sufficient whisky to replenish their supplies.

"We are importing three times as much grain—mostly from Canada—this year, as was imported in 1942," Upson testified.

The WFA official appeared after Samuel Eig, Washington retail liquor dealer, blamed an unprecedented thirst and oversupply of money for much of the current shortage.

Accumulation of Years

Called for questioning about his advertisement of a one-hour sale this week of 8000 bottles of nationally known brands of whisky, Eig told the committee he had accumulated it through years in business.

"If I put all I had on my shelves, I'd sell out in one day," he declared.

"When I started in business nine years ago my clerks would stand and stare when a customer came in with a $50 bill. Now $100 bills look like 50-cent pieces. A man came in the other day with a $500 bill."

"What did you let him have?" asked Van Nuys.

"He got a quart."

Eig added that some of his customers appear at his sales "when they have cases of whisky in their own homes" and said that "customers have waved $10 bills" in the faces of his clerks as "tips" if they would sell them additional whisky.

Eig testified he first noticed the whisky shortage last August.

"I got in two big shipments last June, enough to last through Christmas. I went to New York State later on a vacation.

"When I returned in August, the whisky was almost gone. I thought my warehouse had been robbed.

"I locked the stable after the horse was gone and started limiting sales."

"Hurt" by Query

Turning to the witness, Van Nuys asked:

"Are you one of these retailers who tell their customers they don't have whisky, then take their names and addresses and send 'runners' to see them?"

Eig looking hurt, replied:

"I'm surprised at you, Senator. You know I wouldn't do that."

Eig said he thought the proposal to force liquor out of storage would create another, even more serious shortage within a year.

Solemnly, he warned:

"The only salvation is to make a little more whisky."

Navy Airmen Crack Up Near Bladensburg

A two-seated Navy monoplane, out of gas on a routine flight from Philadelphia to Anacostia Air Base, came gliding out of the sky near Bladensburg, Md., yesterday afternoon, knocked the top branches from a large tree, bounced to a strip of concrete roadway, then smashed headlong into a 4-foot embankment.

The wing snapped in two, the propeller was broken off and the motor flattened into a mass of metal. In spite of this, two Navy men, neither seriously injured, crawled out and walked to the home of Miles Lewis, 4923 Monroe st., Newton Village, where they asked Mrs. Lewis to call an ambulance.

The Naval Potomac River Command identified the fliers as Lieut. (j. g.) Jack Adam Moulton, the pilot, of Cynwyd, Pa., and Aviation Machinist's Mate Second Class Clarence Theodore Pelts, of Easton, Pa.

Churchill Directs War From Sickbed

London (Saturday), December 18 (AP).—With the old tenacity that lifted Britain from the brink of defeat to an assurance of victory, Prime Minister Churchill has insisted on directing the country's war effort from his sick bed in the Middle East where he is fighting lobar pneumonia, the Daily Mail reported today.

The Prime Minister has been in communication with the war cabinet since he became ill, the Daily Mail said, and is keeping in closest touch with the war situation and "transacting urgent state business."

Mrs. Churchill, after a hasty flight from England, reached the bedside of her husband who rallied from the second pneumonia attack in 10 months.

Official reports of the 69-year-old Prime Minister's improvement cheered everyone, but it is felt here that it will be a few days before he passes the crisis.

Secret Weapons

Nazi spokesmen since the war began have made a special point of informing the world that Germany has secret weapons which she would employ at the proper moment to encompass the sudden and total destruction of her enemies. Well over four years have passed since these threats were issued. Yet Germany's "secret" weapons—such as the magnetic mine, the rocket gun, the submarine torpedo that tracks its victim by the sound of the ship's propeller—have all been uncovered and in due course dealt with by defensive devices. Still, Nazi talk of secret weapons continues. The latest weapon to be mentioned is a giant rocket gun which from subterranean shelters along the French coast could pour a devastating hail of explosives on London.

These threats have been circulated from neutral capitals. Doubtless planted by the Germans, they have a double purpose. First, they are designed to reassure the Germans, who have felt the impact of blows delivered by very unsecret weapons in the hands of the Allies, that retaliation is on the way. Secondly, they have the clear purpose of frightening the Allies.

As to this, we must not, of course, assume that Hitler has nothing up his sleeve except his right or left hand. We can take it for granted that German scientists are working night and day, as are our own, to perfect old weapons and discover new ones that will do the greatest possible damage to the enemy. But there is no use in letting our imagination run riot. For this is just what Hitler desires. Thus Prof. Desmond Bernal, scientific adviser to Great Britain's Combined Operations, very sensibly points out, in a discussion of rocket guns of giant size which presumably the Germans may use some day: "It is just as dangerous to exaggerate the fears from an unknown weapon now as it was the fear of air raids at the beginning of the war. To make a weapon many times as effective as any existing one is not a job that can be done easily."

In the last war the Germans had their "Big Bertha." It lobbed shells into Paris from a distance of many miles. But the damage it did was out of proportion to the labor involved in building that weapon or the cost of replacing the speedily worn out barrels. A new version of the "Big Bertha" may prove more successful this time. But, as Professor Bernal points out, it can only "produce the kind of damage we are already well familiar with." In other words, no secret weapon will win the war, either for us or for the enemy.

Airport Largesse

Most Congressmen appear to feel that economy, in contrast to charity, should not begin at home. The House of Representatives exhibited its economy-mindedness in dealing with the first supplemental national defense appropriation bill for 1944. It pruned the requests of the Budget Bureau by a matter of 82 per cent. The Senate repaired some of these ravages and, on its own initiative, plopped into the pie a large and juicy plum in the form of an appropriation of about 10 million dollars for the construction of 31 airports. On Thursday, the House, its scruples about economy overcome, receded from its original position and concurred in the Senate amendment.

The history of these airports is interesting. Work on 24 of them was started or provided for under the WPA. When this agency became defunct, the Civil Aeronautics Administration was empowered to go ahead with the projects—provided the Army or the Navy attested that they were of value to the prosecution of the war. But this the two service departments obstinately refused to do. So the Senate removed them as obstacles and made completion of the airports contingent only upon certification by the WMC as to the availability of manpower and by the WPB as to the availability of critical materials. That there may be no need for the airports is evidently no longer considered relevant.

By an odd coincidence, the seven new sites added to the list by the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Appropriations all, without exception, happen to be located in the home States of subcommittee members. These and the other 24 have no sanction from the Bureau of the Budget, the Army, the Navy or the WPB. If there were any military reason for the construction of these airports, the Army and Navy already have ample funds with which to build them. That they may become useful to the development of civil aviation after the war is somewhat beside the point. A great many desirable construction projects of much greater urgency have had to be set aside until the war is won. Just before approving these airports, the House threw out of the bill a 50-million-dollar appropriation for vitally needed community facilities—schools, nurseries and the like. As Congressman Woodrum put it in his own fastidious fashion, this airport handout "smells a litle bit like that time of the year when you butcher hogs."

Judge Vinson's Case

Stabilization Director Vinson has made a very persuasive argument against congressional approval of the proposed 8-cents-an-hour pay increase for nonoperating railway employes. His stout defense of the Administration's hold-the-line policy before the House Interstate Commerce Committee indicates that the fight against inflation has expert generalship. The country can be grateful for his zeal. The most unfortunate thing about Mr. Vinson's testimony is that it does not point the way to a solution of the dilemma resulting from previous bungling of this important case.

The Senate passed the Truman-Crosser resolution the other day because it believed that the orderly processes of collective bargaining prescribed by the Railway Labor Act had been unnecessarily interrupted. Judge Vinson replies that he has not set aside the provisions of this act—that he has merely imposed the requirements of the stabilization program upon agreements reached under the Railway Labor Act. It was never assumed, of course, that the railroads and their employes, acting under the procedures prescribed by law, could make their agreements effective in violation of the Stabilization Act. The emergency board which recommended an 8-cents-an-hour increase for the nonoperating employes recognized the necessity of conforming to the congressional mandate that wages be stabilized. It proposed adjustments under the proviso which permits correction of "gross inequities." Judge Vinson objected to the board's proposal because it did not seem to square with the President's hold-the-line order.

The controversy thus narrows down to a relatively small issue: Shall the stabilization director's interpretation of the law or that of the emergency board operating under the Railway Labor Act prevail? Ordinarily, of course, the stabilization director's view should be upheld. Automatically to apply his formula in this case, however, would result in botchery for a number of reasons. Job classifications and pay scales have been worked out by the unions and managements over a long period of years. The emergency board composed of specialists who are intimately familiar with this balance between conflicting groups respected the wishes of both the managements and unions not to disturb it. That accounts for the proposed straight 8-cents-an-hour increase. The proposal of the second emergency board set up by the President outside the provisions of the Railway Labor Act would upset these classifications so as to give the largest increases to the lowest-paid employes.

By granting the higher wages in this form Judge Vinson finds it more convenient to approve them as a correction of substandards of living. Then the smaller increases to higher-paid employes are justified on the ground that workers in interrelated jobs must get something in order to "maintain productive efficiency." But the War Labor Board regards wages as being substandard only when they are less than 50 cents (formerly 40 cents) an hour. The formula approved by Mr. Vinson places many railroad workers in even the lowest salary group above the 50-cent margin. It would give the largest group (232,500 workers) from 56 to 65 cents an hour. In other words, this formula would dent the line against inflation almost as much as would the first emergency board's recommendation. And it has the added disadvantage of breaking up the salary classifications approved by the railroads and their workers, of undercutting a contract arrived at through the regular processes prescribed by the Railway Labor Act, and of encouraging a railroad strike.

One other grave difficulty that Judge Vinson did not touch upon is the undenied assertion of spokesmen for the nonoperating unions that the President requested them to accept the 8-cent recommendation at the time it was made and promised to help them get overtime for all work over 40 hours. That action of the Chief Executive in his capacity as the final mediator under the Railway Labor Act was reasonably construed as acceptance of the 8-cent plan by himself. To have another agency upset the agreement when the railroads and their employes were at the point of signing an agreement is the negation of orderly government. In the circumstances we think that it would have been much better to let the original agreement stand.

Judge Vinson has good reason to be worried about precedents, for every grant of higher wages will certainly be used as an argument for demanding another. But the formula which he has approved also sets the dangerous precedent of raising wages above the 50-cent ceiling which the WLB has adopted as a guide in adjusting substandard pay scales. In the circumstances would it not be better to recognize the original emergency board's recommendation as a special settlement reached under the procedure of the Railway Labor Act? It would not be a precedent for approval of any wage increase by the WLB, for no case will go before that agency with a recommendation from a fact-finding board set up by law and with the apparent approval of the President behind it. Whether Congress should step into the breach and correct the bungling of this case is another grave question. All that is left now is a choice of evils. But even if the House does decide to follow the lead of the Senate in declaring that the proposed 8-cent raise will not violate the Stabilization Act, there will be no valid reason for carrying to Congress other price and wage disputes of a quite different character.

War Contracts

We would commend to the Senators who will have to pass upon their Finance Committee's handiwork on the tax bill the testimony of the Undersecretary of War before the House Ways and Means Committee. The proposal had been made before this committee that war contracts should be renegotiated only after taxes had been computed. It was rejected by the committee. Now the Senate Finance Committee has revived and accepted it. Judge Patterson's opposing argument was that such a procedure would nullify the "primary purpose and intent" of the Renegotiation Act. As he put it, this was the "accomplishment of sound pricing, both retroactively and prospectively, whether accomplished through the medium of refunds or by reductions in future prices." Such an achievement would be far more significant than the saving of the millions of dollars by refunds. As we have said before, this is the primary means of staving off inflation. It has been our contention that the performance of the renegotiators has lagged way behind purpose. However, there could be not even an approach to the purpose of renegotiation as stated by Judge Patterson if the Senate committee's amendment stands. And Judge Patterson shows why.

Judge Patterson gives an illustration of what the amendment would mean. Let us, he says, assume two contractors, A and B, each making the same article, for example, a rifle, sold to the Government at a price of $100 per rifle. Each contractor has the same unit costs with the single exception of Federal taxes. Let us further assume that the costs before taxes in each case amounted to $70 per rifle, but that in the case of contractor A the Federal taxes on the $30 profit realized on each rifle amounted to $12, and that in the case of contractor B the Federal taxes amounted to $24. If we assume that a 15 per cent margin over cost represented a reasonable profit, both contractor A and contractor B would be allowed a profit before taxes of approximately $10, and would be required to reduce their prices of future deliveries to approximately $80 per rifle. On the other hand, if renegotiation were to be based upon profit remaining after taxes and an equal amount should be left to each contractor, it is obvious that, if contractor A were to be given a price of $80, leaving him a profit of approximately $10 before taxes and $6 after taxes, it would be necessary to allow contractor B to continue his present price of $100, giving him a profit before taxes of $30 and a profit after taxes of $6, the same as that received by contractor A.

It hardly seems necessary to elaborate on the foregoing illustration or to argue against the absurdity of varying prices in accordance with the varying tax burdens of individual contractors. It would be just as sensible, as Judge Patterson put it, to agree to pay a higher price for a suit of clothes or an automobile or any other piece of desired property because the particular seller was subject to a higher income tax liability than his competitors. If Congress will bear in mind that the Renegotiation Act is a price and not a tax law, it will refuse to agree to the Senate Committee's amendment.

Man Of Courage

Mike Monroney of Oklahoma has just given his elders in the House a lesson in political courage and independence. On Monday he stood up and spoke his mind about the fat handout which his fellow Oklahoman, Congressman Disney, had fashioned for the oil industry. If the House had been in a mood to respond to reason instead of to pressure, Mr. Monroney would have swayed it. He exposed the economic absurdity of the Disney bill. He pointed out its dangerous consequences—successive demands by every other commodity group in the country, wreckage of the price-control program, inflation which, in the end, would nullify all price increases and imperil the value of investments and savings. He talked as an American, not merely as an Oklahoman.

The congressional district represented by Mr. Monroney is one of the richest oil-producing sections of the country. His constituents, if they are shortsighted or selfish, may not like what he did. He felt, nevertheless, as he told the House, that "our responsibility not only rests with the oil industry but it also rests with the millions of consumers who will be ruined by inflation." The real and vital interests of the people of Oklahoma were far better protected by Mr. Monroney than by other members of the State delegation who heckled him from the floor. However concerned they may be about oil, Oklahomans, like other Americans, own war bonds and life insurance policies and savings accounts. It was these that Mr. Monroney sought to safeguard. He is a credit to the voters who sent him to Congress. We need more like him.

THE POOL

There is a pool that spreads a sunken hollow
Set round with little ferns (each fern an arrow
Caught in the earth) whereon each fragile lace tip
The final rays of sun thread . . . pass . . . and slip
From the deep folded wood. Now all is twilit.
Infrequent birdsong tones within the quiet,
Down-dropping through the slant cool-colored leafage;
Down dropping, note by note, exquisite language
Weighing the beauty of a dying moment
And silence.

Butler's Blunder

OUR "DEEP DARK secrets in Latin America" as compiled by Senator Butler have been clearly revealed as a tissue of error by Senator McKellar's statement of the true facts, but there does remain a mystery. It is—what has became of the Butler report?

It is understood that proofs of this document are still being checked — from independent sources, whatever that may mean. Who besides the agencies that gave Senator McKellar his information can provide facts about what they have or have not spent? This is a secret within a mystery.

The McKellar statement entirely disproves the Butler charge of six to eight billions wasted in Latin America and reveals that the true sum spent and lent there for everything from June 30, 1940, to July 1, 1943, amounted to $1,483,373,000. All but $324,185,000 of this went for war materials and ships. Commitments for the fiscal year 1944—mostly for raw materials—are estimated at one billion dollars.

Butler's Fantasia

The McKellar statement does more than explode the figure of the Butler fantasia. Point by point it breaks down the mass of charges made to prove the United States Government a sucker in Latin America. I will not repeat a dozen or more rank major errors that had already been pointed out here, but will list a few more to show further what this Senate Document 132 is.

Butler complained bitterly that American crews had been taken off 12 subchasers and these vessels "given" to Cuba. The truth is that these Coast Guard vessels were lent to Cuba, to operate under strategic United States Naval command. Thus Cubans are sharing the risks of guarding New World sealanes. Ecuadorians have been allowed to risk their necks through similar loans. Will anybody in this country insist that all the drowning done to protect hemisphere waters must be done by United States sailors?

It was charged that 50 million dollars lent to Argentina "enabled them to force a United States firm out of the oil picture." No such loan has ever been made. A loan to build a high-octane gasoline plant in Mexico was indicted. No such loan has ever been made. Many loans included in the blanket charge of waste were made to United States firms to enable them to sell goods in Latin America—and have been repaid with interest!

El Salvador was indicted for forcing "a United States airline to relinquish operations of the control towers at her airports." There are no control towers on the airport at San Salvador, Salvadorean capital.

Latin-American Rubber

The report said only 30,000 pounds of rubber had been got out of Latin America. The McKellar statement shows that we have received 30,000 tons or 67,000,000 pounds. Butler charged that this rubber has cost $500 a pound. The fact is that it has cost around $1.12 to $1.16, figures that will be reduced as costs are spread over coming years. Latin-American rubber cost more than this before the First World War, when it was our only source.

Senator McKellar's 23-page statement on the Butler opus is a masterpiece of condensation. Several times that much space would be required to take up all the mistakes and misrepresentations Senate Document 132 contains.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull does not often raise his voice in a controversy, but when he does, the people of the United States listen and know that they are hearing the bed-rock truth. In one of the strongest statements that he has made in many years, Secretary Hull Tuesday declared his belief that Senator McKellar has "effectively demolished the figures and conclusions on which Senator Butler has based all, or virtually all, his indiscriminate attacks."

"Senator Butler now protests that he had no intention of misrepresenting or injuring the Good Neighbor Policy," said Secretary Hull. "Whatever his intentions may have been, the effects of what he said, its manner and its implications, were such as to constitute a most unfair and unfounded attack calculated to injure the whole policy."

He then listed the many contributions that Latin America has made in the war and stated flatly: "The plain truth is that without this cooperation the course of the war in highly essential strategic areas might have been different." And he specified North Africa.

The fact is that Senator Butler cannot keep his report under wraps long enough to pat it into shape. Will any group of United States Senators waste their valuable time seriously considering this thoroughly discredited document?

Senator McKellar pointed out what should be done from the floor of the Senate Monday. In the interest of truth, in recognition of our debt to the Latin-American nations that have helped swing the scales toward our eventual victory in this war, and for the dignity of the United States Senate, the Butler report should be withdrawn.

Beachhead At Arawe

By Barnet Nover

Another Step Toward Truk

THERE IS A PASSAGE in the communique issued from General MacArthur's Headquarters following the invasion of New Britain which highlights the revolutionary change which has taken place in the South Pacific during the past year.

"In a combined operation of land, sea and air forces," says the communique, "our ground troops have landed near Arawe. The enemy's surprise was complete."

The enemy's surprise was complete. Yet it could have been no secret to the Japanese high command for some time that New Britain, with its great sea and air base at Rabaul, would sooner or later be the goal of an Allied invasion.

FOR 16 MONTHS we have been moving on Rabaul and from two directions.

Our Marines landed on Guadalcanal early in August last year and since then have driven the Japanese out of all the Solomon Islands except a corner of Bougainville.

In New Guinea, Allied offensive operations also began last summer and have since resulted in the acquisition by our forces of the entire southeastern coast of the island, including the southern two-thirds of the Huon Peninsula which is separated from New Britain by Dampier Strait.

In the meantime Allied air attacks on Rabaul, Gasmata, Cape Gloucester, Arawe and other enemy-held points on New Britain steadily increased. During the past two months alone a total of 3000 tons of bombs have been dropped on the island.

So the Japanese were fully forewarned that we were coming. Yet they were taken by surprise.

THEY WERE TAKEN BY surprise because they are now under attack at many points along the periphery of their far-flung empire, cannot be sure where any major assault is to take place and must, therefore, scatter their forces so as to be prepared, as best they can, for all possible contingencies.

For instance, on the day (December 17) which saw our troops landing on Arawe, following a fierce shelling and bombing of Japanese positions by American warships and planes, a great variety of subsidiary Allied attacks were carried out against the Japanese.

Sorong in Netherlands New Guinea was bombed, as was an airdrome on Etman Island. Raids were also carried out by Allied bombing planes against several points on the island of Timor while our long-range fighters strafed revetments, gun positions and supply dumps at the airdrome of Borpop on New Ireland.

On that same December 17 Rabaul was raided and 32 tons of explosives were dropped on Gasmata, Allied ground forces continued their attack on Lakona on the Huon Peninsula and the offensive on Bougainville was continued.

Nor can we omit the operations carried out by Major General Chennault's Fourteenth Air Force in China which attacked Japanese concentrations in the Tungting Lake area.

THE TABLES have been turned. The Japanese now find themselves in the same relative position that we and our allies found ourselves in during the first eight months of the Pacific war. Then it was our enemies who had the initiative. The initiative now rests with us.

We must not assume from this that the going in the Pacific will henceforth be progressively easier, that the road to Tokyo will be an easy stroll. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The fact is that after 16 months of successes we are still 270 miles from Rabaul and well over 1000 miles, at the nearest point, from Truk, Japan's great naval base in the Carolines. And we know from what happened at Tarawa and, on a smaller scale, from what happened at Umtimgalu Village on New Britain, where a force of Rangers was cut to pieces while trying to land, how expensive it can be to grapple with the enemy where he is well entrenched.

HOWEVER, we are now closer than we have ever been to the heart of Japanese power, and after Rabaul is taken—that, too, will be no easy matter—we shall be within bombing range of Truk.

So while we are regaining slowly and piecemeal what in the months after Pearl Harbor we lost rapidly and in wholesale fashion, we have reason to be encouraged by the progress that has been made. The beachhead at Arawe is visible proof of that.

World Capital

I belive that the Moscow agreement ranks in importance with the entry of the United States into the Second World War.

The idea of the League of Nations, as it was developed by Woodrow Wilson, the greatest humanitarian of our age, had no success because without the support of the Americans, it was helpless. America has proven her miraculous strength for the second time. Military experts will say that whichever side America is on must win the war. America must meet her obligation by using her power to avoid war. Had America declared her active participation in a war at any time during Hitler's march to power, I do not believe he would have dared to involve the world in a war.

The United States has an ordained part to play in foreign affairs because, firstly, she has no territorial or imperialistic ambitions, and, secondly, because Americans are the sons of Europe. Thus, the President of the United States, no matter what his political party, may be the objective judge in differences between countries. The Treaty of Portsmouth which concluded the Russo-Japanese War in 1905 gave the world an example of objectivity and legalistic fairness. The Japanese who came to the conference with great ambitions were appeased by the reasonableness of the American people. The idea of the League of Nations originated in America, and now it is the United States that must conduct the people of the world on a path of trust and cooperation.

A significant problem concerns the proper location for the tribunal of the world. Europe itself has proven the futility of housing it there. Geneva is too near to all the small politicians who can come and mismanage things. The only place for the new tribunal of nations is in Washington.

We even have in Washington a perfect place for the world tribunal. It is the Pentagon. Built at a time when the United States could have put practically its entire army within its walls, it has become the greatest war department in the world, where a great army has been created and its power and supplies sent to all armies of all the Allies. This house has helped to win the war; it is the proper place for a tribunal of nations which will win the peace. In the quietness of Arlington it will be possible to work and to inspire the world with its ideas.

Older Women

We are told, via radio and press, that there aren't enough young women enlisting in the Army, Navy, etc. They want older women to take the young women's places so they can enlist. Why doesn't the War Department take a few of the older women itself? Surely they can do a lot of work the younger women can do, so men can be released to fight.

HARRIETTE WHITTAM GREEN.
Lisbon Falls, Me., Dec. 16.

Peace By Persuasion

Military experts do not prepare for war in general. They make plans against particular, definite possible enemy nations. If we do likewise in preparing for peace, we shall face several tasks.

Policing the world, so much discussed, is the least of problems. If the leading powers want to stop aggression, they can and will; if not, they won't, no matter what the documents may say. The proof lies in the fact that inadequacy of the League of Nations was no excuse for not stopping the Axis. There was abundant authority and power. The thing lacking was understanding. Hitler and Japan were misjudged.

Force, essential foundation for peace, is not peace. At home, the only places ruled mainly by coercion are prisons. We must extinguish the flame of war, not put it in a chimney.

Accordingly, our permanent enemies must not be nations at all, but the various causes of war; chiefly economic distress, resentment at supposed injustice, fear, hatred, the yearning to gratify vanity by becoming a larger nation. We are not yet wise enough to control business depressions, but effective policing can bring security and banish fear.

The other causes are psychological. Hence the main road to peace is by persuasion; we must "sell," not impose, ideas of just settlements, and show that the attempt at superiority by conquest defeats itself. WALTER P. WHITE.
Washington, Dec. 15.

Model Family

I read in the paper that Dame May Whitty, a movie actress, defends the movies for the young. Now you wouldn't expect a person in the moving picture business to condemn herself and say that the moving pictures are bad. Well, go to a show nowadays and see if someone doesn't get killed. Yes, and they will show you how to do it. The perfect murder. I have two boys 16-18. They never go to shows. They play baseball, swim, tennis, skate and cook. They make good candy with honey and use good chocolate at 75 cents a pound—that other stuff is full of corn starch.

We have a nice home. They play the organ, at home and at church. We listen to the radio very little but when we do we get the best. No blood and thunder. We read a lot and talk about what we read at the table. We all eat together. We have a nice mother. She does work for the Red Cross, in fact we all do. Give blood and save all of our glass jars and cans.

We have a club named: No Movies This Year. We have about 90 members and expect more. People who really know what the score is don't go to the movies. We go to plays and concerts at the Rose Bowl in the summer time.

'Anti-Nazi' Junkers

By Paul Winkler

Negotiated Peace

WITH MONOTONOUS regularity, news stories from neutral countries are heralding attempts by a group including German Junkers, Reichwehr generals, industrialists and bankers to set up an "anti-Nazi" German government—and start negotiations with the Allies for a possible peace.

There are no confidential reports extant about the precise decisions of the chief Junker organizations.

The corner of the veil which covers the secret activity of the Junkers was lifted briefly in April, 1940, at the time of Fritz von Thyssen's "flight" to Paris. The French secret service learned then that Thyssen's departure had been preceded by discussions among German heavy industrialists, closely associated with the Junker group, concerning the possibility for making a negotiated peace on terms favorable to Germany.

Information their agents in various countries had sent them concurred in estimating that both Allied leaders and the public were out to suppress Nazism, but were capable of accepting any other German groups as possible negotiators of a liberal peace. The general opinion was that the Allied countries had concentrated so completely on hating the Nazis that they would no longer object to dealing with the Junkers.

Violent Anti-Hitlerism

The assumption from this report would seem to be that when Thyssen left Germany and staged a spectacle of violent anti-Hitlerism, it was because he had been selected to be the emissary of the anti-Nazi German movement of 1940, designed, like that of 1943, to trick the Allies into accepting a peace which would leave in power the elements who had put the Nazis in, at the reasonable price of putting them out again—until next time.

Today, underground reports on the attitude of the Junkers and related groups in Germany is that they interpret the expression "unconditional surrender" as applying to the Nazis only, and believe that they, by overthrowing, or seeming to overthrow, the Nazi regime, could get conditions.

There was a time when the word "Junker" sounded almost as bad to the world at large as the word "Nazi" does today.

There are four main groups which seem to be as strongly involved as the Nazis in responsibility for the present state of affairs. They are:

1. The Junkers.
2. The heavy industrialists and the banks allied with them.
3. The army leaders.
4. The high state officials, who are influenced specifically by the Prussians among them.

Of these groups, some observers like to describe the army clique as the most dangerous, and others concentrate on the industrialists. But the fact is that the Junkers deserve to top the list, from either point of view, since the army and heavy industry take orders from the Junker organizations, who provide the ideology for both, and for the Prussian state officials as well. In fact, the other three groups might be described as crystallization in certain functions of the Junker ideology.

Feudal Society

The term "Junker" has a much more definite and restricted meaning than is usually realized. The Junkers consist of 13,000 families living on large estates east of the Elbe. Their lands are exploited in feudal fashion, intermarriage is the rule, they are rigidly organized for the "protection" of their own interests, and, in short, they are united by a thousand ties.

It was natural that this group, convinced of its own superiority, should exert its influence over the Prussian state, and then over the German state, long before the advent of Nazism, for the domination and exploitation of other peoples. The doctrine of a superior race springs from the Junker's own high opinion of himself: and the concomitant theory that the superior race is entitled to enslave other and inferior peoples has been expressed in conquest by Junker-dominated military forces ever since the days of the Teutonic Knights, whom the Junkers proudly and frequently hail as their ancestors.

Since the advent of Nazism, the Junkers have sedulously spread throughout the world the doctrine that "the poor Junkers have been practically wiped out by the Nazis," trying to shield the fact that they themselves brought Hitler to power because he served their purposes.

The fact is that the Nazi regime never took any measures to curb the preponderant influence of the Junkers in affairs of state. Junkers played important roles, both as diplomats and soldiers, in preparing the invasion of Poland and of Russia. Their members staffed the army and took the orders of the Junker organizations. They have had close working arrangements with the industrialists of the Ruhr since their first filling of orders for secret rearmament in violation of the Versailles Treaty.

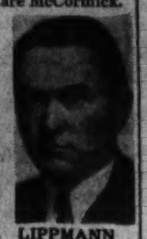
Thus it is the group which put the Nazis into power, the group which is hiding behind the Nazis, the group whose decisions have been put into force by the Nazis, which today is whispering to the Allies: "Let us scuttle the Nazis, and deal with you."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On "Power Politics"

A VERY SEARCHING question, which should be faced and answered now, has been raised by Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick. It is whether the Soviet - Czechoslovak pact, signed by Dr. Benes in Moscow the other day, is consistent with the agreements reached by Secretary Hull. Mrs. McCormick says that "the original aim of this Government was to build up a peace structure founded on a four-power pact and broadening into a United Nations organization which would render bilateral arrangements within the circle unnecessary . . ." and she argues that this Czech pact is a reversion to "old-fashioned and futile insurance systems based on mutual assistance pacts."



LIPPMANN

With great respect for Mrs. McCormick and for her immense gifts of perception and insight, I venture to say that it cannot ever have been the serious and considered view of the United States Government that the new peace structure precluded or rendered unnecessary all "bilateral arrangements."

WE COULD not hold the view which she ascribes to us because we also have made bilateral pacts of mutual assistance with our neighbors, and no one has suggested that we ought to renounce them. We have such pacts with Canada, Mexico and Cuba. We have the substance of such pacts with all the Caribbean states; we have mutual assistance agreements with many of the principal South American republics. We are committed by the Tydings-McDuffie Act to making a mutual-assistance pact with the independent republic of the Philippines. We have never thought that making specific provisions for the defense of our position in the Pacific and for the defense of the Western Hemisphere was "old-fashioned and futile." On the contrary, we are proud of these arrangements and hold them to be wise, progressive and in the common interest.

Nor do we regret it, and complain, that Britain and Portugal have an ancient pact which has made available to us the use of the Azores for the protection of our shipping. Why, then, do we feel called upon to object if Czechoslovakia and Russia sign a pact for the purpose of making secure their strategic position against a revival of German military power during the next 20 years? And why do we think it extraordinary, or vaguely reprehensible, that Russia should wish her immediate neighbors to be friendly allies? Do we not object when the Argentine, which is about 6000 miles from New York, is anti-American? And would we feel that we were violating the spirit of the Atlantic Charter if we threw the weight of our influence against the anti-American government in the Argentine?

We must be careful, I believe, not to have one standard of political morals for our Allies and another for ourselves.

THE THEORY that we must oppose all bilateral mutual assistance pacts will not, I believe, stand up if we examine it. Everything depends on who makes the pact with whom. A military pact between next-door neighbors—say the United States and Mexico—is a quite different proposition than would be a pact, let us say, between Russia and Mexico, or between the United States and Rumania. The radical difference is that the United States and Mexico are within the same system of strategic security whereas Russia and Mexico, or the United States and Rumania, are not within the same system of strategic security. For us to make a special pact with Mexico is, assuming our intentions to be honorable, to improve our common defense; if Russia made a special pact with Mexico, we should at once ask the Mexicans and the Russians for an explanation.

Will it be said that this is a reversion to the doctrine of "spheres of influence"? If so, let us look at it without being bewildered by a phrase which we have not defined. The phrase, in its ugly meaning, connotes a division of the world by great powers into separate spheres within which one great power is the master and its will is law. We are opposed to that, and the Good Neighbor Policy is, we hold, the constructive alternative. Under the Good Neighbor Policy we are in honor bound to respect the national rights of our smallest and weakest neighbor in this hemisphere. But this does not mean, and it could not possibly mean, that our smallest and weakest neighbor would be free to grant an air base or political facilities to Japan. We expect our neighbors to participate in the common defense of the Americas; otherwise we could not be good neighbors. Moreover, since we happen to be as a matter of fact, and not because of any other superiority, the principal military power in the defense of the Americas we are bound to exert a leading influence in arranging the defense.

IN THIS sense it is not only unavoidable but eminently proper to recognize that each great power does have a sphere in which its influence and responsibility are primary. To deny it would be to indulge in the pretense, wholly illusory and dangerously confusing, that every state has an identical influence, interest, power, and responsibility everywhere. No solid structure can be built on any such pretense—that, for example, whether it be to the Baltic Sea or the Caribbean, Russia and the United States are in an identical relation.

The sound view, I believe, is to recognize the regional differences of interest and influence, and to found the structure of the peace upon the fact that the smaller neighbors of great powers can best insure their independence by promoting security in the region where they live. The greatest risk for a small state is to become the object of dispute among great powers. No state on the borders of Russia, no state in western Europe near Britain, no neighbor republic in the Americas, could hope for tranquillity and order except by recognizing the fact that it exists within a particular system of strategic defense. For it to rebel against that fact is to invite endless trouble for itself and for the world.

IS THIS "power politics?" It is. But let us not be bewildered by that phrase. In the last analysis, all international politics are now and will be unless the separate nations disappear, a function of their actual and potential power. The problem of peace is not how to abolish power, or to pretend to ignore it, but how to organize power, regulate it, bring it under law, and in general to civilize the exercise of it.

We shall come only gradually, and with immense difficulty, to that great end. But we can take no other road to peace.

The Gallup Poll

Willkie Is Leading Choice of Kentucky GOP With Dewey and MacArthur Also Strong

By GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 17.—Last month's Republican victories in Kentucky bring up the question as to how GOP voters in that border State feel about presidential candidates for 1944.

Kentucky will send 22 delegates to the GOP convention and, with the party hoping to split up the solid South, their judgment will carry considerable weight.

A survey of the State shows that, so far as the rank and file of Kentucky Republican voters are concerned, Wendell L. Willkie is the top choice today for President, with Governor Dewey of New York a fairly close second.

General Douglas MacArthur stands third in the survey, with Senator Taft of Ohio close behind him. Senator Taft does better in Kentucky than his fellow Ohioan and avowed presidential candidate, Governor Bricker.

When Kentucky Republicans were asked to pick their present choice for 1944 from a list of men most often discussed by political commentators and party leaders as possible presidential timber, they recorded their choices as follows:

Willkie	31%
Dewey	26
MacArthur	20
Taft	13
Bricker	8
Warren	1
Stassen	1

Surveys in the past have found that Republican voters throughout the whole South are more partial to Willkie than to any other Republican. The Kentucky vote in today's survey thus fits into the Southern pattern.

Another area where Willkie is strong is New England. As reported yesterday, he is the top choice among Republican voters in Massachusetts.

Servicemen Ask 100 Billions' Insurance

Almost 100 billion dollars' worth of National Service Life Insurance have been applied for by members of the armed forces so far in the present war, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs announced yesterday.

The sum exceeds 70 per cent of the total amount of life insurance now outstanding in private companies in the United States, he said. An advisory committee of actuaries composed of men in the life insurance field, met with General Hines for the first time yesterday.

Average Crop Yield of '36-'41 Exceeded This Year by 9%

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department, in final figures for the year, reported today that total crop production this year fell about 6 per cent below the record harvest of 1942 but topped the average of the five preceding seasons by 9 per cent.

The total production of all foods, however—including such livestock products as meats, milk, poultry and eggs produced largely from feed grown in previous years—set a new record of about 4 per cent above last year to meet unprecedented wartime requirements.

The department said this year's output was remarkable in the light of shortages of manpower, supplies, equipment, and delays with wet weather and floods. It said farmers worked more hours per week and more Sundays than in any year known to this generation.

"Shortages of equipment, parts, gasoline, tires and packages have threatened breakdowns at times," the department said, "but in the main, the tractors, harvesting machines and trucks were kept rolling, and the near record crops have been put under cover."

The final figures show record production of potatoes, beans, peas, soybeans, peanuts, rice, and various minor crops, including nuts, hemp, and some commercial vegetables, particularly snap beans, carrots and lettuce. The orange crop promises to exceed previous records.

Crops which have been exceeded only a few times in past years included corn, barley, sorghums for grain, all grains as a group, all hay crops and vegetables for processing. The list of crops that are not far from usual production, excluding drought seasons, includes wheat, oats, tobacco, sweet potatoes and various less important crops such as maple syrup, prunes and cranberries.

The department said indications are that the aggregate production of sheep, cattle, hogs, poultry, eggs and milk will be 8 per cent above production last year and 31 per cent higher than the 1937-41 average.

Federal Council Backs Jan. 1 As Prayer Day

Supporting the President's action in proclaiming New Year's Day a National Day of Prayer, the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in a letter to 1500 ministers' associations and church councils, urged the churches of every community to observe the day with some definite program. Inclosed in the letter were materials and suggestions prepared by the council to aid local communities in planning special services.

TUCKER

"It is always important for the people of a nation to acknowledge their dependence upon God and to seek His guidance and His strength," Bishop Tucker said. "But in such a time of suffering and conflict as this, it is indispensable to the welfare of our Nation and of our people individually."

The folder of program suggestions sent to the local church councils include several alternative ways of observing the day of prayer to meet varying conditions in different communities. It was urged that in the services prayer be the dominant element, and the following were contained in the folder: Prayers of penitence, prayers for those in service, prayers for our country, prayers for these times, prayers for the church, and prayers for peace.

In addition it was suggested that prayers be offered for the subjugated countries, the persecuted Jews, the prisoners of war, the millions of war refugees, the wounded of all armies, the ministry of the chaplains, the sorrowing of the war.

The Coming of

ELIJAH TO EARTH

When will he come? Where will he come? How will he come? What message will he bring to the earth when he comes?

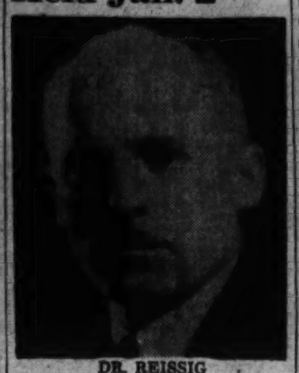
'Join Church' Sunday to Be Held Jan. 2



DR. REISSIG

The first Sunday in January will again be observed as "Join the Church Sunday" in the churches of Metropolitan Washington. The first "Join the Church Sunday" was such a success that the committee on evangelism of the Washington Federation of Churches has planned to make it an annual event.

MARSHALL

The Rev. J. Lloyd Black, a member of the committee on evangelism, is the author of a new folder entitled, "Transfer Please," which deals with the matter of the people of Washington transferring their membership to local churches.

This folder is issued by the committee on evangelism. Dr. Robin Gould of the Francis Asbury Methodist Church is chairman, and those serving with him are the Revs. J. Lloyd Black, G. K. Bowers, H. F. Chandler, A. F. Elmes, I. S. Ernst, Glenn Faucett, Edward Gabler, Peter Marshall, J. F. Monroe, Lee A. Peeler, A. J. Pfeiffer, E. H. Pruden, C. C. Roberts, F. Nelson Schlegel, G. E. Schnabel, M. C. Smith and Maj. James Longino of the Salvation Army.

According to Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary, the plan of "Join the Church Sunday" has been circulated across the Nation. Many communities have adopted it.

Covenant Church Yule Soloists Announced

Soloists for the Christmas musical program tomorrow at 11 a. m., at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church will be Bernice Gordon, soprano; Henrietta Plum, mezzo-soprano; George Barritt, tenor, and Navy Lieut. Gordon Barnes, baritone. Theodore Schaefer is minister of music. A candlelight carol service will be at 5 p. m.

15th Street Christian Church To Be Scene of Yule Pageant

The eleventh annual presentation of "The New Born King," Christmas pageant, will be presented tomorrow at 5:15 and 8:15 p. m. at Fifteenth Street Christian Church, 15th st. and Kentucky ave. se., with the cooperation of the Third Christian Church.

The production has been written and arranged by Mrs. Harold Snyder. The voices of prophecy narrators will be represented by the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, sr., pastor of Fifteenth Street Church, and his son, the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, jr., pastor of Third Church, 6th and H sts. sw.

In describing the well-known pageant yesterday the Fifteenth Street Church pastor said:

"From a very average beginning it has grown to its present institution of over a hundred participants. Through the years many changes have been made to improve the spiritual and scriptural effectiveness of this beautiful story of the birth of Christ.

"Each year in the spirit of sacrifice our church presents this sermon of action with no attempt to be theatrical, but to portray with Biblical realism and faithful characterization the period of long ago. Scene after scene passes in reverent succession amid the soft glow of candlelight. The strains of sweet organ and choir music, the parade of colorful costumes with special lighting effects against a snow-white background creates a unique spiritual atmosphere long to be remembered."

Religion in the News And News in Religion

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, emissary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, has "exchanged views" with Chinese Christian leaders in Chungking on the organization of the postwar world, according to a Chungking radio broadcast.

The broadcast stated that Dr. Poling, who arrived in the Chinese capital late in November with credentials from President Roosevelt to China's President, Chiang Kai-shek, had expressed a belief at an informal welcome meeting that the churches of the Allied Nations could help forge a better world.

"The churches of the United Nations can help to strengthen the cooperation of their respective governments and reinforce each other in the task of stressing a few practical common aims for a better world order," he said.

Dr. Poling was quoted as saying that he had come to Chungking to obtain the signature of Chinese religious leaders to the "Six Pillars of Peace" declaration, formulated last March by the Federal Council Commission to Study the Basis of a Just and Durable Peace.

The broadcast said Dr. Poling would proceed from China to Australia and Soviet Russia on a similar mission of "sounding out Australian and Soviet opinions of postwar peace."

Cleveland Columnist to Preach Here

The Rev. Dilworth Lupton, D.D., former minister of the First Unitarian Church, Cleveland, now a columnist with the Cleveland Press, will preach at the 11 o'clock Christmas services tomorrow at All Souls' Unitarian Church. All departments in the church school will join in a Christmas service at 9:45 a. m. at which the pageant, "Christmas, Festival of Humanity," will be presented. In the afternoon, at 5 o'clock, Lewis Atwater, organist, will be assisted by the quartet in "Carols by Candlelight." The pageant will be repeated immediately following. Following the supper for young people at 6 o'clock, Martin Stark will speak on "Wartime Transportation in the District." The feature at the motion picture hour at 7:30 will be "George Washington Slept Here." In the foreign language cinema series, "Viva Christo Rey," will be the feature on Saturday evening, December 18.

Chanukah Holiday Rites Begin Tuesday

Hebrew homes and houses of worship will begin the celebration of Chanukah, the holiday commemorating the Jews' deliverance from the cruel King Antiochus, Tuesday night, continuing for eight days. For each of the eight days a candle will be lighted to recall the "Miracle of the Light."

In the third century B. C. Antiochus put statues of Greek gods in the Hebrew temple at Jerusalem. The Hebrews, banded together by Judas Macabee, fled to the hills and waged war against the King who had defiled their temple.

Victorious, the Hebrews returned and having restored their temple, burned a bit of oil which ordinarily would have lasted but one day. Miraculously the oil lasted eight days.

In lighting the candles now one is lit the first day, two the second, and so on until all eight burn at once.

Choir to Sing Yule Cantata

The choir of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, will render the Yule cantata, "The Star of Bethlehem," by Harker, tomorrow at 8 p. m., as the musical setting for a Christmas pageant directed by Mrs. J. Warren Hastings. A brass quartet from the Army Air Forces' Band at Bolling Field will play carols on the church steps before the service.

There has been about a 4 per cent decline in the school population of the District of Columbia, despite the swollen population of wartime Washington and environs.

The island empire of Japan is so extended that its southernmost island is subtropic, its northernmost subarctic.

2 Dead Heroes to Be Honored

Two members of the Atonement Lutheran congregation who died in the service of their country will be memorialized at services there tomorrow at 8 p. m., led by the Rev. Howard E. Snyder.

They will be First Lieut. Rodney L. Due, Army Air Corps, who died in action in the European theater October 13, and Harry Elwood Srisa, chief water tender on the minesweeper Skill, who died November 22 from injuries sustained when the vessel was blown up in Italian waters. Just before his death, Lieutenant Due had been awarded the Purple Heart, which has been received posthumously by his mother, Mrs. Adelia L. Lewis, now of Chicago, Ill.

Chaplain Ralph W. Rogers, of Walter Reed Hospital, will address the services. There will be a color guard from Thirteenth Base headquarters, Air Base Squadron, Bolling Field.

Lesson-Sermon Topic Announced

The Christian Science lesson-sermon for tomorrow is "Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" Services are held at 11 a. m. and repeated at 8 p. m., except Third Church at 5 p. m. All are invited to attend the services and the Wednesday evening meeting at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations comprising the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet." (Matt. 24:6.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God creates and governs the universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual ideas, which He evolves, and they are obedient to the Mind that makes them." (Page 295.)

Gifts for Needy To Be Received

Gifts for the under-privileged will be received at services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Augustana Lutheran Church. The choir will render Handel's "Messiah." A pre-Yule Communion service will be held at 11 a. m.

The Luther League's annual banquet Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. will be addressed by the Rev. Eric Gustafson, of Staten Island, N. Y. A candlelight midnight adoration service will take place Friday at 11 p. m. The traditional Swedish "Julotta" will be celebrated Christmas Day at 6 a. m.

Friday Morning Music Club Honors Former Head's Memory

By Ray C. B. Brown

Friday Morning Music Club presents a concert in honor of the memory of Mrs. Eugene Byrnes on Friday night in the music room of Dumbarton Oaks. Artists: William Kroll, Louis Graeier, Jasha Weissi and Daniel Saidenberg (The Coolidge String Quartet), Britton Johnston, flute; Paul Garrett, clarinet; Dorothy Remsen, harp. Program: "Komm, suesser Tod" (Bach-Kindler), String Quartet in C major, K. V. 465 (Mozart), Introduction and Allegro (Ravel), String Quartet, Op. 22, No. 3 (Hindemith).

Members of the Friday Morning Music Club and invited guests assembled last evening in the music room of Dumbarton Oaks to hear a concert honoring the memory of Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, who had been president of the organization for 24 years. It was a gracious tribute to a woman whose devotion to music had been long and deep. Those privileged by her friendship and acquainted with her kindliness and geniality will agree that a memorial of this kind was the most appropriate. She would not have wanted eulogy, and none was delivered; nothing would have pleased her more than to be in the thoughts of her friends in music's company, and that was what took place.

A "Hail and Farewell" was expressed by Bach's "Komm, suesser Tod" in a transcription made for the occasion by Hans Kindler, and as the strains of that grave joy in the release from tribulation and the entry into spiritual peace sounded in the room, they evoked no feeling of grief, but rather lifted the auditors to communion with one living on a loftier plane.

One of Mrs. Byrnes' favorite quartets, Mozart's profound and lovely C major, maintained the mood of sympathy. That strange adagio which opens the first movement had just the right suggestion of awe in the contemplation of the mystery of eternity.

Ravel's Introduction and Allegro, with Dorothy Remsen at the harp, was an abstraction of a period, a quintessence of a tasteful elegance. Last on the program was Paul Hindemith's third quartet from his Opus 22, a work in which refinement and bluntness are curiously mingled. It was beautifully played by the Coolidge Quartet with an eloquence that left no dubiety about the sincere interpretation.

Ayres' Views on Outlook

Defeat of Germany will bring "so considerable a decrease in the demand for munitions and ships that shortages of manpower will no longer be major problems," Brig. Gen. Leonard Porter Ayres declared today.

Calculating that "this has been our greatest boom year" in a business sense, the economist said: "It now seems likely that national income in 1944 will not differ much from that of 1943. Probably the increase or decrease will not be more than 9 per cent."

Noting Americans "have not questioned the fundamental goodness of their money" and have bought large totals of war bonds, he said as long as we continue to act in "restrained and prudent fashion" we "shall avoid real inflation."

WPB to Allow Production of Civilian Items

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson promised yesterday to authorize resumed production of civilian items as rapidly as possible, but cautioned against expecting any "substantial increase in the production of consumer goods in the immediate future."

In a formal statement, the WPB head announced that a study of all orders placing restrictions on civilian production was being made so that any easing in the over-all materials supply picture can be "translated into benefits for the civilian economy wherever it is possible to do so."

Simultaneously the WPB announced that it had amended four orders limiting the use of metals in order to:

Lift all restrictions on use of chromium and nickel in the manufacture of valves for the expanded 1944 truck program, permit use of copper and copper base alloys in renewable electric fuses and also in electrical wiring devices (ending further need to use steel as a substitute), and ease restrictions on use of small quantities of iridium.

Ice Boxes Permitted

WPB also authorized production of 269,809 ice boxes during the first quarter of this year. The increased number will be made in easy labor market areas, WPB announced, to avoid complicating the labor supply problems of Group I and II labor shortage areas. Manufacturers in Group I and II areas were restricted to their current quotas.

"The small number of mechanical refrigerators remaining in the frozen stockpile, and the impossibility of resuming even limited production of mechanical refrigerators while the needed facilities and labor continue to be required for war production, indicate a continued demand for ice refrigerators for some time to come," WPB said.

However, it was understood that a mechanical refrigerator production program is being prepared—to start later in 1944.

Nelson's note of caution was designed to explain why the WPB has not removed restrictions on use of steel for civilians to avert the closing of several steel-making furnaces recently.

War Demand Still Strong

Nelson explained that the shutdown furnaces were making types of steel which are not particularly usable in civilian products.

"The war demand for flat rolled steel products (types which are required to make a great number of civilian items) including plates, sheets, strip and tinplate, continues to exceed supply," Nelson said, thus indicating that rolling-mill capacity is one of the major bottlenecks on the civilian production front.

It was understood that the present strain on rolling-mill facilities—to get out steel plate for the ship and landing-barge programs—is expected to ease about the middle of 1944. The demands for steel plate from both the merchant ship and landing-barge programs are expected to be substantially smaller after July 1, 1944.

Nelson stated that "it may presently be possible to make supplies of structural shapes, allow steel bars (needed for reinforced concrete) and some steel wire products available to civilians because of a currently easier situation.

But he added that "it can easily happen that the steel itself is available but that the other materials or finished parts which go with it to make consumer goods are not available."

Errol Flynn in 'Northern Pursuit' And Christmas Revue on the Stage Open Week's Run at the Earle

AT LEAST, it looks like Christmas on the Earle screen this week. The picturesque winter scenes—and there are precious few of any other kind—in the Canadian north country suggest an unbroken succession of animated greeting cards, but there the Yuletide analogy ends.

The film play Frank Gruber and Alvah Bessie have contrived from a story by Leslie T. White and called "Northern Pursuit" is no kin to the spirit of "Peace on Earth." It is another yarn of attempted Nazi sabotage, vaguely reminiscent of "The Invaders," with overtones of James Oliver Curwood. The pursuit is a leisurely one that seems to rely largely upon the scenic grandeur of its snowy background for chief effect, neglecting the vital matter of compounding the suspense for which it obviously strives as it goes along.

The play is doubly one of deception and trickery, since Steve Wagner, a corporal in the Northwest Mounted, pretends to have himself dishonorably discharged from the force as a Nazi sympathizer in order to trap the colonel of the Luftwaffe, who seeks the hidden base of a bomber with which he plans to blow as much of the Dominion as possible off the map.

A Familiar Device

The Warner Brothers employed the same device in "Across the Pacific," with the advantage, however, of first taking the audience into their confidence. Such candor would have aided suspense immeasurably in the present instance.

However that may or may not be, there are two intervals of action in "Northern Pursuit" that may be relied upon to shake the spectator out of any lethargy into which he may have slipped One is a spectacular ski chase through a magnificent mountain area; the other, the final sequence in the bombing plane, when Corporal Wagner dispels whatever doubt earlier scenes may have attached to him.

The piece is well enough played, without at any time touching off the spark it evidently was intended to ignite. The Mounties just aren't as hair-trigger as they used to be.

Hare and Hound Score

In the Wagner role, Errol Flynn is as effective as the obscure script will permit. He makes a striking figure of a guy, in his handsome fur togs, and exercises a cool brain under stress—although you don't realize it at the time—and packs a hefty wallop in either hand and a sure eye down a gun barrel. Col. Hugo von Keller, the object of his pursuit, again casts Helmut Dantine as the ruthless sort of Hun he previously has depicted with such fine skill in "Mrs. Miniver," "Edge of Darkness" and the like.

The only feminine role of importance is played with blonde attractiveness by Julie Bishop, the heroic Laura McBain, who follows her man into the wilds. Alec Craig works the picture's principal comedy vein, as her father, Angus, and John Ridgely, appearing for the first time since his memorable performance in "Air Force," matches the star's portrayal as his sidekick on their frozen patrol. Long-suffering Gene Lockhart finds himself called upon once more to impersonate the treacherous weakling, hoist by his own petard, a chore that has been his almost continuously since he made the tactical error of demonstrating that he can do this sort of thing better than anyone else as far back as "Algiers." The remainder of the cast is merely atmospheric.

Strictly Christmas

Harry Anger's new stage revue is nicely in the mood of the season. Joyce Romero's offstage singing of "White Christmas" and "Holy Night, Silent Night" leads directly to Eileen Ritter's "child's dream of Christmas," among which is a clever number by the Roxyettes and a line of dancing dolls that create a novel effect.

The ballet is gracefully and skillfully represented by Carol King and Chester Dolphin concludes the specialty portion of the bill with another exhibit of his hazardous upside-down juggling, laced together with a running line of comedy chatter and decorated with an attractive assistant.

Carey Wilson's Defense Reel, "Brothers in Blood," having to do with the importance of blood plasma; a delightful George Pal Puppetoon comedy, "Jasper Goes Fishing," and the picturized news events are the items in the toe of the stocking.

ERROL FLYNN
as he appears in the stellar role of "Northern Pursuit," currently on the screen at the Earle Theater, and, no doubt, in the Aleutians, where he is entertaining Servicemen between pictures. The supporting cast in the Warner picture is led by Helmut Dantine and Julie Bishop, two able players.

Bees as Jewelry Singing Star's Fad

Hollywood.—A collection of similar or identical pins is probably the most versatile of jewelry.

Kathryn Grayson, who appears in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Thousands Cheer," has a swarm of small silver bees, which she wears almost continuouly. Sometimes in a cluster on her bonnet; then again in small groups on the cuffs of her gantlets; in a long file on her fur muff.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WHILE HANDSOME John D. M. Hamilton, former GOP chairman, was touring the West on his stop-Willkie trip, the indomitable Mr. Willkie was on a tour of his own, determined not to be stopped. At Denver, Colo., their paths almost crossed.

Willkie missed Hamilton by just one day. But though he didn't see John, he heard all about his sales talk: John had addressed a group of businessmen and had suddenly shifted his argument against Willkie to this new line:

"Russia will make such fierce demands on Poland," Hamilton said, in effect, "that there will be a strong American reaction against Russia. Therefore, we must not nominate anyone like Willkie, who has been friendly to Russia."

What interested Willkie was the fact that exactly this same argument has suddenly cropped up in other quarters, and his friends have traced it right to one spot—New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and the apartment of Herbert Hoover.

Hoover, who bitterly opposed Russian recognition while he was in the White House, has been passing out word that the reaction against Russia would come soon and that the Republican Party must not get encumbered with anyone like Willkie, who is pro-Russian.

Meanwhile, Gov. Tom Dewey is reported as having remarked to friends that he had been seeing quite a bit of Polish leaders recently.

Also, Alf Landon conferred with Hoover before making his draft-Dewey statement. Shortly thereafter, Hamilton, returning from his long trek, came out for Dewey, which means that Pennsylvania's Joe Pew is also for Dewey.

Those who have talked to Herbert Hoover say they are convinced he does not want to run again himself, but that they have never seen him so determined to pick the candidate and guide the destinies of the Republican Party.

Clash Over Soldiers' Vote

DEBONAIR, dashing Senator Burnet Maybank of South Carolina rushed to the telephone the other night, demanded that the Federal Communications Commission take a certain radio commentator off the air.

Maybank was beside himself with fury because the commentator had reported that Maybank's predecessor in the Senate, War Mobilizer James Byrnes, disagreed with Southern Senators regarding the soldier-vote bill and paid tribute to Senator Claude Pepper of Florida as the only Southern Senator with enough statesmanship to put the soldiers' vote ahead of race prejudice.

What was not mentioned on the radio, but what was a fact nevertheless, was that ex-Senator Byrnes was especially provoked with his old friend and fellow South Carolinian Maybank. It was Byrnes who did most to elect Maybank to office. Without Byrnes' powerful support, the junior Senator from South Carolina would have got nowhere.

Hence, shortly after Maybank's vote against the soldier-vote bill, a member of Byrnes' staff gave Maybank some plain, unadulterated language. "The country would have been much better off," he said, "if we had left you in Charleston."

Note: Another thing Senator Maybank didn't know was that Byrnes was instrumental in getting ailing Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, another real statesman, to write a letter from his home, coming out for the soldiers' vote.

Milo Perkins And President

MILO PERKINS, the man who suffered most—aside from the public—in the Jesse Jones-Henry Wallace row, is being considered to head up General Aniline and Dye under an arrangement with the Alien Property Custodian.

General Aniline and Dye, which had strong German hookups before Pearl Harbor and owns valuable German patents, is being reorganized as an all-American company, and it is proposed that Perkins would be a good watchdog to see that the organization did not lean back toward Germany after the war.

Final decision in the matter probably will be made at the White House, but the President, a few months ago, was hostile to Perkins.

Nearly 10 years ago, Milo was one of the President's ace New Dealers, went down the line for him on everything. But as Henry Wallace's executive in charge of the Board of Economic Warfare, he consistently fought Jesse Jones.

Climax came shortly after Milo's second boy was killed in the war, when his staff presented him with an ambulance in commemoration of his son. At a meeting of BEW employes to present the gift, Milo expressed his thanks, talked mainly about the winning of the war but, in passing, made a very brief reference to the Jesse Jones delays in buying war materials such as quinine, rubber, etc., and told his staff to keep up the fight to purchase these commodities.

Jones' name was not mentioned by Perkins, but a newspaper reporter who had sneaked in, posing as a BEW staff member, wrote up the story and placed emphasis on this particular part of Perkins' speech. The President read the story next morning, immediately fired Perkins, and decided the controversy largely in favor of Jones. Later, when Leo Crowley wanted to make Perkins head of the reorganized BEW, the President said no.

Harry Hopkins—"Mr. X"

BEFORE LEAVING for the Cairo-Teheran conferences, Harry Hopkins spent some time in the new Navy Hospital at Bethesda, Md., having a thorough check-up. But his identity was concealed, and he was referred to as "Mr. X."

One morning, some books arrived from the White House, and they were given to a nurse's aide, with instructions to take them to the top floor and deliver them to Mr. X. When she reached the top floor, the aide asked the nurse at the desk where Mr. X's room was.

"Anything for Mr. X must be left here at the desk," said the nurse.

"But," responded the nurse's aide, "I was told to take these books to Mr. X personally."

"But I have orders," said the nurse, "that no one is to go to Mr. X's room."

The argument was ended by the appearance of Mr. X in person. Wrapped in a dressing gown, Harry Hopkins strolled down the corridor.

"Why, Mr. Hopkins!" said the nurse's aide. "So you are the mysterious Mr. X."

"Oh, hello," said Hopkins. "What are you doing here?"

"Can't you tell by my costume?" she replied.

The nurse's aide was Mrs. Paul McNutt, wife of the War Manpower Commissioner.

Broadway Notes and Anecdotes

New York, Dec. 17.—When the President left the country secretly, a legal question arose about his veto power. The Constitution provides that if a bill is not returned by the President within 10 days after it is presented, then it shall become a law, as if he had signed it . . . The President, during his absence, wanted to veto some bills. The question was whether the 10 days began to run from the time the bill was presented to him personally. The Wilson precedent, in the last war, was no help—for Wilson's mission abroad was not a secret one . . . But the Army planes took the bills to the President for his veto, and returned them to Washington in time to obviate any question of legality.

GRETA GARBO

Lieut Sidney Kingsley, the playwright, is a victim of whooping cough . . . Sonny Tufts, Paramount's favorite to play the role of Sherman Billingsley in the movie, "Stork Club," hasn't been in the Stork Club since he was barred by Billingsley, a few years ago . . . Billy Rose, owner of the Diamond Horseshoe and "Carmen Jones," told the Dutch Treat Club: "What has the Metropolitan Opera got that I don't have—except a deficit?" . . . Celeste Holm, the night-club star featured in "Oklahoma," will broadcast to Norway for the OWI. She's of Norwegian stock . . . Robert Ringling will do the next circus show all by himself.

When Greta Garbo was introduced to Maurice Maeterlinck, a few days ago, the Belgian poet asked her, in French: "Do you speak French?" . . . Garbo replied: "No. Only 10 words" . . . Garbo then asked him, in English: "Can you speak English?" She waited, and then added: "How many English words do you know?" . . . Maeterlinck held up four fingers . . . "And what are the four English words you know?" asked Garbo . . . Maeterlinck recited the four: "Let's not talk English."

Jan Masaryk's first speech, since the signing of the Soviet-Czech pact, will be made December 20 at the Commodore, at the Russian War Relief dinner . . . Former Under Secretary of the Interior Fortas, who received a medical discharge from the Navy last week, will not return to Ickes' office. Fortas will start practicing law again . . . Chico Marx's daughter told Groucho Marx's daughter that her father soon would be going overseas to entertain the troops. "When is he leaving?" asked Groucho's daughter. "Nn, nn, not allowed to say," replied Chico's daughter, mysteriously. Groucho's daughter snickered: "Since when is your father a convoy?"

When Stepin Fetchit, the movie comic, was in a Chicago jail, the authorities received strange letters from Hollywood assuring them that their prisoner was not Stepin Fetchit. These letters from Hollywood all bore Fetchit's true signature . . . The authorities were puzzled. They questioned their prisoner, and were positive that he was the film comic. But the disturbing letters still came, all bearing his real signature, all reciting true and accurate information . . . Fetchit is out of jail now. He confesses that he wrote those letters himself and sent them to a Hollywood friend who mailed them back to Chicago.

Michael Todd will close his musical, "Something for the Boys," on January 15. He then will tour it, with Joan Blondell in the starring role . . . Oscar Hammerstein has invited his entire "Oklahoma" cast to attend the matinee for his "Carmen Jones." . . . Milton Berle's leave from Twentieth Century-Fox has been extended until January 15, so that he will continue in the "Follies." . . . Artie Shaw, who covered the Pacific as a Navy bandmaster, will head for Africa next . . . Boro Pres. Cashmore of Brooklyn, who forced the elimination of the broadcasts of the City Council meetings, now says he has no objections, "provided we get a sponsor."

The announcement about the Brazilian military mission which will visit the fronts omitted two names—the sons of Foreign Minister Aranha. They insist upon going, one as a private and the other as a corporal. "It's right that we should be the first to go," said Private Aranha. "After all, we led the fight to sever relations with the Axis"

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We don't think any professional football games have been fixed. But we don't like one of the arguments that the indignant defenders of pro football's good faith have been putting forth—namely, that it's too hard a job to throw a football game.

POVICH

Pro football is on the level, we prefer to think, because of the character of the men who play it, not because the game is not susceptible to the "fix." The best guarantee of the integrity of the game is the fierce pride of the men who are part of it. They have to love pro football to start with, elsethey wouldn't take the physical beatings it entails.

In baseball, there are characters who are not completely virtuous. They are heavy drinkers, like to bat around in the small hours, play the horses, and look you straight in the eye and tell you an untruth. But there has been no suspicion in the last 20 years that big league baseball has ever had a "fix." The same guys whom you might give the fish-eye as improper company, would bat you down in a surge of righteous indignation if you suggested they ever threw a ball game.

We may be naive, but it's our belief that it never occurs to a football player or a big league ball player to be party to a fix. The one who did would never escape from the dressing room with his life.

But we won't hold still for any argument that pro football is too tough to fix. We'd say a football game is easier to throw than a baseball game, and doesn't require as many men in on it. Thus the temptations among football players are greater and consequently so are their loyalties to the game.

It requires no more than one player to lose a football game. One missed assignment, and poof! you're licked. The man defending against a pass, for example, is slow to cover an eligible receiver and it gives touchdown. No great suspicion can be attached to the play. There's nothing unusual about that kind of blunder.

Who is in a better position to stave off or permit a touchdown than the safety man? A half dozen times in the course of a game, he's in that kind of a spot. The end who permits himself to get sucked in, the guard who over-shifts, the roving center who plays a bit out of position—any of 'em can set up the winning touchdown. Games are lost that way, and not deliberately, and nobody is suspected.

Football, by the nature of the game is a scramble, and in the scramble it's difficult to detect which man missed his assignment. Who can tell, for example, whether a man deliberately fumbled or dropped a pass? The occurrence is too common. Not the deliberate one, but the unintentional.

We'd say baseball's crimes are harder to cover up. Even in the 1919 World Series in which the Black Sox figured, there was suspicion from the outset that all was not on the level. When Eddie Cicotte, one of the men in on the fix, cut off a throw from the outfield to the plate in the first game, fans gasped. Something looked very wrong.

It's significant that when the gamblers staged the "fix" they hired no less than seven of the Chicago players to assure it. They couldn't depend on simply one or two men to throw the games. Maybe they wouldn't be in a position to guarantee the fix.

The difficulty of throwing a baseball game was never better illustrated than the time the Reds were playing the Braves at Boston about 25 years ago. Two of the Reds were betting on the Braves to win. Going into the first of the ninth, the Braves had a one-run lead.

There were two out and none on and the game seemed to be over, with their bets safe. The next man up was in on the "fix" and attempted to end it all with a weak grounder to the shortstop. He ran the ball out as a matter of course and was disappointed to learn that he was safe on first because of a bad throw. The next man up, Ed Rousch, was not in on the fix and he hit a home run, and the Reds won the game.

There was the case, too, of the no-hit game Eddie Plank almost pitched for the Browns in 1915. There was no "fix" to that one. It was in St. Louis and Plank had not allowed a hit. There were now two out in the ninth and the Browns had a 9-0 lead, with Eddie Foster the next man up for Washington.

"I'm not going to spoil his no-hitter," Foster told Manager Clark Griffith. So to make certain that he wouldn't get a hit, Foster went up to the plate with a little fungo bat instead of his favorite piece of lumber. He swung at the first pitch. The bat broke in half. But the ball floated over the first baseman's head for a two-base hit that Foster didn't want and tried to avoid.

Steve Warga Takes Lead in Miami Open

Giants Made Favorites Over 'Skins

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Rye, N. Y., Dec. 17.—The Redskins were delighted to learn today that the New York odds makers had climbed off the fence and installed the Giants as definite favorites in Sunday's Eastern Division championship playoff clash in the Polo Grounds. The Redskins, you know, play their best ball as underdogs.

Coach Dutch Bergman's crew points with pride to only two games over the past season as representative of their best football, but in those two they were really great—when they beat Green Bay in Milwaukee, 33 to 7, and the Bears in Washington, 21 to 7. In both games the 'Skins were very decided underdogs.

Four weeks have elapsed since the Redskins were really "hot" the day they humbled the Bears just one week after the Bears beat the Giants, 56 to 7. Prior to the Bear game it had been five weeks since they had played what Packer Coach Curly Lambeau called one of the greatest games he had ever seen in giving Green Bay one of its worst defeats in two decades.

Redskins Feel "Up"

The Redskins are getting that old feeling about being "up" this week, and they also feel the Giants are in for a letdown after playing excellent football the past two weeks in beating the 'Skins, 14-10 and 31-7, coming from behind both times. Football players are firm believers in the "ups" and "downs" in football. You can't put your finger on it but it's there.

The 'Skins caried out Bergman's four-point program here today at Westchester Country Club, with variations. An outdoor workout was scheduled for 11 o'clock but everytime the 'Skins travel more than 50 miles from home something happens to the equipment and this trip was no exception. The trunks missed the train.

The coach thus called for a morning indoor signal drill in the setting of stuffed swordfish and mounted deer heads in the Westchester sports house. When it came time to line up and run through plays in street clothes nobody had a football, as the balls were in the missing trunks. In the meantime, however, Joe Pasqua had stepped up to a slot machine, inserted a quarter, thinking the machine paid off in quarters, and when two cherries and a lemon showed on the machine out rolled a golf ball for non-golfer Pasqua. Joe saved the day, however, by producing the golf ball and the players ran through the signal drill using the golf ball, with considerable fumbling on reverses. After all, they fumbled five times last Sunday with a football.

90-Minute Workout

The trunks arrived in the afternoon and Bergman ran the squad through a 90-minute outdoor drill with the temperature hitting below 20 degrees. Pictures after dinner and then a meeting concluded the day's activities.

The team used tennis shoes in the outdoor workout and if the Polo Grounds remain in its frozen condition at gametime Sunday both the Redskins and Giants will take to the field in sneakers. A wisecracker on the 'Skins commented "If we loose that game we'd better keep 'em on and sneak out of town." The shoes were ordered expressly for this game and all players were fitted with the exception of Lou Rymkus, Willie Wilkin and Joe Aguirre, who required 12s.

Wilbur Moore worked out lightly and Bergman may use "Gabby" Sunday if Dr. Pete Moran gives consent. Moore lost considerable blood following a had fall in the first Giant game which bruised his hip and produced a blood clot. He was given blood transfusions Sunday and Monday of the past week but Moore has asked to play and if the doctor approves Bergman may use him for spot performances. Moore is the gamest guy in the league and he really wants to win this one.

The Polo Grounds was almost sold out tonight after the last 14,000 seats were placed on sale in the morning, 7000 reserved, 4000 bleachers and 3000 specially priced

Quarterback Tuffy Leemans and Tackles Al Blozis and Vic Carroll (left to right) are awaiting the chance tomorrow to slap down the Redskins. All three starred on Washington gridirons; Leemans as the most famous back in George Washington U. history; Blozis as the star tackle of Georgetown's unbeaten teams and record-holding shot-putter, and Carroll as a tackle, guard and center for the Redskins for six seasons before beind traded to Giants.

Dark Horse Now 4 Up on Craig Wood

Miami, Fla., Dec. 17 (AP).—Two civilian workers, one on the swing shift while he plays golf this week, showed up the name players in the second round of the $5000 Miami Open Tournament today and took over the lead.

Steve Warga, jr., of Miami, radio operator for an airline, went into first place with a 139 for 36 holes, adding a par 35-35—70 today to his opening 69.

Two strokes behind was Joe Zarhardt of Norristown, Pa., who is on three-weeks leave from his factory job while he plays here. Shooting 34-36 for a par round, Zarhardt had a 141 and was two strokes ahead of National Open Champion Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., who dropped to third place.

Wood Led First Round

Wood led the first round with a su'>-par 68, but his chipping was off today, as a dismal rain pushed many scores sky-high, and his card showed 38-37—75 for 143.

Warga was jubilant as he finished his play and hurried to nearby Pan-American Airfield to report for work. He was pleased with his putting.

"My clubs are hot," he declared, "and if I can keep going, I may win.

"Wood's the only one I'm afraid of."

He's been playing for seven years, but never finished better than a sixth-place tie in this event.

Zarhardt, a pro at Norristown Club, finished thirteenth last year at the Miami Springs course.

He, too, thinks he has a good chance to win, particularly if his chip shots keep finding the mark.

Wood Has Poor Luck

Wood had poor luck today. On the par-five thirteenth, he was on the edge of the green on two and tried to sink his chip for an eagle. He missed by inches, then saw his easy putt rim the cup.

Tony Penna of Dayton, Ohio, moved up into contention even though he had a one over par 35-36—71. He went into a fourth place tie at 144 with Amateurs Willie Turnesa of Hollywood, Fla., and Earl Christiansen of Miami and Professionals Orville White of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Pvt. Otey Crisman of Coral Gables.

Both Turnesa, former National Amateur champion who now is an ensign in the Navy, and Christiansen, police detective, carded 36-38—74 today after playing par golf yesterday.

White had 39-35—74, while Crisman gained with a 37-36—73.

Catholic U. Wins, 65-44, Over Gallaudet

Catholic University's Cardinal cagers made an auspicious Mason-Dixon Conference debut last night, overwhelming a scrappy Gallaudet College quintet, 65 to 44, on the Roosevelt High court. In swamping their arch rivals, the Red Birds ran their winning streak to four games, to remain the only unbeaten team in the District.

Five determined boys from Brookland completely outclassed Gallaudet, last year's conference champs, from the outset and held a 37-to-14 advantage at the half. All scoring was made by the regulars, who played most of the game. Coach Johnny Long used his starting team until the final three minutes of play, when he ran in four reserves with instructions to freeze the ball.

Scoring honors of the evening went to rangy Dick Scanlan, the Catholic center, who overcame teammate Johnny Mercak's first-period hot hand to sink six baskets and eight charity tosses for a total of 20 points. Scanlan only missed one of his free opportunities. Mercak went wild in the initial frame with one-handed shots that wouldn't miss and caged eight 2-pointers. In the second stanza he hit with one-and-one for a game total of 19 points.

Catholic opened the game with a high-geared offensive consisting of Mercak and Scanlon and this pair ran the count to 19-4 before the Blues could get into the game. Lanky Fred Rice aided the winners in this period when he hit the hoops for 9 points.

The Cards were handling the ball well and forcing Gallaudet to take their shots from far out for the most part.

Gallaudet's Jayvees won a preliminary tilt from Kendall School, 34-22. OSCAR ELDER.

3800 Fans See Cutters Beat York Stars, 6-3

Vice Admiral Russell R. Waesche and Rear Admirals Robert Donohue and L. T. Chalker of the United States Coast Guard joined 3800 enthusiastic spectators in the applause last night as the colorful Coast Guard Cutters of Curtis Bay, Md., put on a wild last period offensive to defeat His Majesty's Canadian Ship York all-stars in a spirited ice hockey match at Uline Arena, 6 to 3.

The Toronto naval stars made a great stand for two periods after gaining a 1-0 jump on Joe Klulkay's goal at 16:40 of the first semester but the Cutters tied it up with less than a minute of the second period remaining when "Bud" Cook cashed a rebound from Joe Kuceler after Redd Gilbe had been pulled out of the net on a great save.

Turned on Power

The Coast Guardsmen turned on the power in the last chapter when Nanny Cotlow, Eddie Olson, Art Coulter, Charley Plitt and Alez Motter rattled off five successive goals in less than nine minutes.

The gallant HMS York All-Stars fought right down to the final buzzer and Dave Livingstone and Hugh Mair had chipped in two more goals before play was halted.

The spectators were kept in an uproar from the opening whistle as the teams played spirited, but clean, ice hockey. Not so much as one penalty was called throughout the evening, although players of both teams were piled up on the ice in redhot scrimmages in the last period.

Mariucci, Cotlow Star

Capt. John "Choo Choo" Mariucci and Manny Cotlow, giant defensemen, played outstanding games for the Coast Guard, while Red Garrett, Toronto Navy's fast skating former New York Ranger, electrified the fans with his all around brilliance.

However, most of the applause was reserved for the superlative goal tending of the Cutters' Frankie Brimsek, formerly of the Boston Bruins, and Red Gilbert, Toronto's flaming thatched midget who contributed magnificent saves.

Ray Hanbury Enters Gloves Semifinals

Ray Hanbury, making his first start in the Golden Gloves tournament, decisively defeated Leonard Zuniga of Fort Meade last night to advance to the semifinal round at Turner's Arena.

Hanbury, brother of the professional, Lew Hanbury, was the complete master of the former Detroit amateur. Hanbury, strong and willing, had Zuniga backing away most of the time.

Crashing through to victories in the senior division were Joe Gannon of the Apollo Club and Jimmy Buhr of Bolling Field. Gannon defeated Gerry Rice in the 147-pound class, while Buhr stopped Bobby Lynch of the U. S. Navy, in 1 minute and 40 seconds of the first round.

The battle between the Merrick Club and the National Training School for team honors took on a much tighter aspect as the Merrick boys won four out of their five scheduled contests. The National Training School won 6 out of 11 contests in which they engaged.

Results:

NOVICE DIVISION

112-pound class—Robert Dailey (Fete's A. C.) forfeited to John Kelly (National Training School).

118-pound class—Joe Smith (Naval Torpedo Station) outpointed Wesley Steele (National Training School), three rounds; Paul Homer (Mount Rainier Boys Club) outpointed Herbert Jones (Merrick Club), three rounds.

Angott Beats Bobby Ruffin In Slugfest

By Sid Feder

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—Using a slugging, take-a-chance kind of clouting style that he's never shown before in nine years of beak-busting, Sammy Angott punched out a bristling 10-round decision over Bobby Ruffin tonight in Madison Square Garden. Angott scaled 137; Ruffin 135½.

Down for a one-count in the first round when his brand new walk-in-and-wallop system left him wide open for a short inside right, Pennsylvania Sammy took the play away from the Long Island youngster most of the rest of the way, staggered him twice and came home on top by a clearcut margin.

At the finish, the Associated Press gave Angott six rounds, voted three for Ruffin and called one even.

Judge Bill Healy and Referee Frank Fullam each gave the fight to Angott by a comfortable edge, but Judge Bob Cunningham voted for Ruffin, 5 rounds to 4 with 1 even.

A crowd of 11,844 chipped in to a gross gate of $30,784 to watch the slugging party, in which Sammy's National Boxing Association world lightweight championship wasn't at stake, but in which his hopes for a chance at the New York-recognized titleholder—Beau Jack—certainly were.

In the eight-round semiwindup, Joey Peralta, Tamaqua, Pa., veteran, came along in the last three rounds to take a close decision over Mike Delia, an improving lightweight from Los Angeles.

Coolidge Rally Defeats Blair

With a 9-point deficit at the half, the Coolidge Colts forged ahead in the last quarter to defeat the Montgomery Blair quint, 33-27, last night. Eastern Beats Presidents

Eastern High quint captured its third straight victory of the young year yesterday at Eastern gym, snapping the three-game win streak of George Washington High of Alexandria by turning back the Virginians, 36-22.

Lamon was the big noise for the Ramblers with five field goals for a total of 10 points. Hemsley, G. W. center, tossed in three double-decker and four free tosses to equal Lamon's total. Eastern ran up a 19-12 lead at halftime and continued to outscore the Alexandrians by the same margin in the second half.

Louis to Go Overseas Soon With Troupe

Sergt. Joe Louis Barrow, world's heavyweight boxing champion, will end his exhibition tour of Army posts in this country, January 20 and then go overseas to visit camps in various theaters of operations.

This was announced yesterday by the War Department. Louis and his group are scheduled for 21 appearances between now and January 20 at camps in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina and North Carolina.

Traveling with Louis, the Associated Press reports, are Sergt. James Edgar, Corpl. Walker Smith (Sugar Ray Robinson), Pvt. George Wilson (Jackie Wilson), Corpl. Bob Smith and Corp. Robert J. Payne, trainer.

To date the group, traveling under direction of the Army Special Services Division, has visited more than 70 Army installations in every section of the United States except the Southeast.

The War Department said that by the end of the tour more than 630,000 soldiers will have witnessed the exhibitions with an average attendance of 7000 at each appearance.

Cororal Smith joined the party recently at Camp Hood, Tex., replacing Sergt. George Nicholson who had been boxing with Louis at every appearance.

Marshall Five Scores, 46-39, Over Maryland

University of Maryland's basketball team dropped its second game in as many starts last night, bowing to a deceptive Marshall College quint from Huntington, W. Va., 46-39, at College Park.

Led by Bill Toothman's big 20 points, Marshall broke out into an 18-8 lead in the first 12 minutes. The Old Liners found the range and pulled up to a tie score by virtue of two field goals by little Bob Gralley. Jack Kishi and Bryan Fennell hooped shots to place Maryland in front at the half time, 23-19.

Toothman's sharpshooting overtook the Marylanders and sent Marshall ahead, 28-25. Gralley, smallest man on the Terp squad and high scorer with 12 points, sparked a short-lived liner rally that brought Maryland to within 1 point of Marshall's 40-39 advantage. West Virginia's May and Tootham combined to register 6 more points for the margin of victory.

'Skins Don't Like All-League Team

Notes—The Redskins were not impressed with the All-League team released Thursday. They wondered who Bruiser Kinard knew to make it and who was going to do what in the backfield with Baugh, Lukman-Canadeo and Clark together . . .

The league will pick a "most valuable player" this year, and it will probably be Don Hutson again . . . Should Sunday's game end in a tie and force the quick-death method of scoring, the last part of the game will be played under the lights, as the Polo Grounds is in a valley and darkness settles quickly. Starting time has been moved up to 2:05.

When General Manager Sid Carroll gathered his flock around him in Union Station Thursday, preparatory to passing out train seats, he took time out from scolding two players for being late to discover he left the tickets at the Redskin office . . . The losing players Sunday will collect approximately $150 from the league as second-place money after the championship game receipts have been divided . . . Dick Farman will join the Redskins tomorrow, as a spectator only, while Dr. Clarence Spears will also be an early arrival with his scout reports for last-minute tips.

Mello, Coleman To Pass Up Game

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 17 (AP).—Notre Dame's Jim Mello and Herb Coleman, members of the "National Champion" Irish eleven selected for the All-East team which will oppose the All-West in the Shrine game at San Francisco New Year's Day, both announced today they will be unable to play in the contest. They will report for induction in the Navy V-5 program Tuesday.

Mauriello Bout With Billy Conn Looms in Near Future

Efforts to match Soldier Billy Conn and Tami Mauriello, New York heavyweight who meets Herbert Marshall, Brooklyn Negro, in a 10-round bout at Uline Arena December 27, in a giant benefit card at Madison Square Garden are underway, it was learned reliably last night.

Mauriello, a native New Yorker, is rated second only to Jimmy Bivins, Cleveland Negro, recognized in many quarters as the "duration champ," is fresh from a six-round knockout of Mike Alfano in St. Louis. He also only recently scored decisively over Lee Savold for the second straight time.

Conn, who hasn't fought since entering the Army, is understood to be seeking Army permission to go through with the bout, and prospects are understood to be good inasmuch as several war charities are expected to benefit.

A match with Holman Williams, Chicago Negro, shortly after the first of the year has been promised the winner of the Tee Hubert-Gene Buffalo eight-rounder Monday night at Turner's Arena by Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, who yesterday revealed he virtually has Williams signed to meet the victor.

Also, Menendez said, the winner of the Walter Haefer-Buddy Thomas eight-round cofeature would be given a crack at Lee Oma, New York heavyweight who only recently outpointed Georgie Parks here.

One of the greatest collection of fight pictures ever assembled will be shown at Turner's Arena four times daily next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Complete two-hour shows will start at 1:30, 3:30, 7:30 and 9:30.

The films include such memorable fights as both Dempsey-Tunney bouts, Willard-Dempsey, Carpentier-Dempsey, Firpo-Dempsey, Sharkey-Dempsey, Leonard-Tendler, Walker-Schmeling, Firpo-Brennan, Louis-Buddy Baer, Louis-Max Baer, Louis-Schmeling (first fight), Louis-Levinsky, Ross-Petrolle, Uzcudun-Wills and Sharkey-Maloney. Added attractions include the showing of the bombing of Tokyo and the American invasion of Sicily.

Paul Martellini, AFL chairman of New England, Jack Laken, business representative of Jackie Wilson, and Joe Turner are copromoters of the venture.

Time Play Wins Feature Race

Bar Ship Runs Second and Corora Third

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 17. Jockey Sammy Palumbo, riding in his best form, booted J. L. Friedman's Time Play home ahead of six rivals in the Atlas Club Purse, featuring the Friday program. The 7-year-old son of Play Time and Foreign Play was driven into the wire 2 lengths ahead of Edgar G. Horn's Bar Ship with S. H. Hall's Corora third. The battle was over the mile and an eighth course and Time Play was clocked in 1:56 2-5.

The weather was warmer than during the early stages of the week and some 4000 fans reported. Time Play showed his winning effort over a fast track and registered time of 1:56 2-5.

Time Play shook off early challenges of Todcan and Eyeopener to take a good lead but was kept to pressure when Bar Ship, ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk, moved up menancingly at the stretch turn. Corora closed willingly to be third.

The shortest daily double of the meeting and one of the smallest pay-offs since this track opened resulted from a pair of winning favorites. The army of ticketholders collected a mere $5.20 on the twin wager. Dividend, owned by C. P. Sowers of Washington, D. C., won the first race at a $2.60 mutuel. A Garisto's Sally of Erin was the winner of the second. Apprentice Jockey H. Hadry brought this $5 shot home in front of the pack, winning by a nose in a photo finish.

NOTES—Jockey Danny Scocca may head for New Orleans, instead of Florida. He has a good offer from the Louisiana track. Apprentice Jockey John Matral is 28 years old and did not start riding until two years ago. He won here with Col Scott last July. It is easy to keep sober in Charles Town. Most of the spots are out of beer and the ration book of a resident of this county is necessary to procure anything stronger at the State store. Seems a safe bet that the meeting, closing tomorrow, will have had a fast track every day. This is the first time the oval has not been off during a Charles Town session. Tough break for owners with horses who prefer the mud. Racing Secretary Fred Burton has arranged a nice show for the getaway day. In the fourth race, Roman Boy meets Mar d'Esprit, Honeymaid and other speedsters. In the fifth, Chop Sticks clashes with Phantom Player, Top Transit and others. The final event will bring together Cruiser, Robert E. Lee, Alfred Stewart and other winners at the meeting in a test of a mile and a quarter. If you can't get up here, WOL will air three races, beginning at 2 p. m.

Giants Favored Over Redskins

seats for school children. The capacity is 51,000, without the special sideline seats which were not erected as the Giant management learned it would cost an average of $2.60 in labor alone for each seat, and as they sell for $2.20 that comes under the heading of bad business.

The Redskins were amused by stories from New York that the Giants had a number of new plays they were going to use Sunday after having won last Sunday's game on new plays. "Yes, they were new plays," Bergman said. "They scored one touchdown by blocking a quick kick, two on long-pass plays where their ends went straight down and got beyond our men who were supposed to cover them, and another on a reverse Ward Cuff has been running for seven years. New play, bah."

Bergman spent most of the practice session working on the mistakes which cost the 'Skins the last two games and put them in the divisional playoff Sunday instead of the championship playoff which they had locked up in midseason but forgot to turn the key. In the morning session the line spent an hour shifting in the proper places on defense to combat the Giants' shifting and deception.

Yankees, Giants To Air Games

New York, Dec. 17 (AP).—The New York Giants and the New York Yankees, after a year's absence from the air, will broadcast their 1944 home games, it was announced jointly by the clubs today. Station WINS will carry the games. The Brooklyn Dodgers' games will be broadcast as in the past.

A. U. to Play Hopkins Five Here Tonight

American University will make its third start of the season tonight, entertaining Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore in the A. U. gym at 8:30 o'clock in a Mason-Dixon Conference game.

Coach Clarence Sheffer's Eagles beat Bridgewater in overtime in their first start and lost to Loyola of Baltimore in the final minutes Tuesday night. The Johnnies opened by losing to Gallaudet Thursday night by 15 points.

With members of the Navy training program working in with the six civilian student members of the American U. squad in spare moments, the Eagles figure to improve with each outing in the early season games.

A. U. is favored over the Johnnies but will have its hands full against Marshall College Monday night at American U.

Middlemen Profiteering, Gillette Says

Backed by a series of Government studies revealing what he called "amazing war profits in food industries," Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, declared yesterday he will "wade into the field of middle pricing" as soon as the Christmas holidays are over and insist OPA launch there its next price-control ventures.

"Obviously very little, if anything, has been done to bring under control all the prices and markups and handling charges between the farmer and the retailer," he declared. "So when a retail price is considered too high, the person who gets pushed back is the farmer."

Studies made by "a Government price control agency showed a group of 19 medium-sized meat packers had profit increases as high as 638 per cent, Gillette said.

Scouts to Use Holidays for Paper Salvage

Washington area Scouts and Cubs, designated sole solicitors and collectors in the intensified paper salvage drive which began this week, were urged yesterday by D. C. Salvage Committee officials to utilize their holiday vacations in perfecting accumulation depot and collection plans.

Salvage heads pointed out that Scouts will devote their spare time to the war effort in sending the drive off with heavy contributions next week. Registration thus far has been slow since mailing of instruction forms and coupons, on which donors are to designate collection days, was delayed.

Meanwhile, the majority of the District troops and packs met last night to perfect organization of their parts in the campaign. Each troop or pack will be responsible for homes and offices in its area only.

In answer to complaints that the Scout drive might overlap other Washington paper drives, salvage officials pointed out that the program sponsored by The Post is designed to reach sources untapped in previous campaigns. It is estimated that 40 per cent of the potential waste paper supply is being neglected.

Typical of the Scouts' response to pleas for vitally needed waste paper is the all-out effort of Troop 83, which organized its drive two weeks ago even though the boys had received no instructions, other than advance notices in The Post.

Making their first collections last Saturday, the troop has already collected several hundred pounds of paper.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Roosevelt Orders 2 Hours Yule Leave

President Roosevelt yesterday at his press conference ordered Federal agencies to give two hours of shopping leave Friday, December 24, to those employes who can be spared. At the same time the President spanked those agencies that released employes on Thanksgiving and he reaffirmed his policy with emphasis that the only holiday for Government workers would be Christmas. The President referred to the release of employes as a mice-play-while-the-cat's-away matter. Mr. Roosevelt was in the Middle East at the time. His no-holiday plan except Christmas blasts the hopes of Federal officials who had hoped to see holidays for Federal workers return next year. High officials were ready to propose that half the holidays be observed next year.

The President pointed out that he was ordering shopping leave for Federal workers at the suggestion of William H. McReynolds, his administrative assistant on personnel. The plan is for Federal agencies to close two hours early on Christmas Eve day. It has been the custom to close all or half of the day preceding Christmas and the McReynolds suggestion was made to make the closing uniform. The Council of Personnel Administration and the Civil Service Commission approved of the two-hour early closing. The President's action was predicted here.

Former Gov. Herbert Lehman will build up his American staff for his United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration from the agency he formerly headed, Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, which was transferred to the Foreign Economic Administration. He gave the 300-odd employes of OFFRA until Monday to make up their minds whether to join UNRRA or remain with FEA. Employes who choose to remain with him, Lehman said, will remain on the FEA payroll until Congress appropriates funds for UNRRA. All employes were assured of jobs in any event, either in FEA or UNRRA.

The people who go with UNRRA, Lehman said, may get shorter titles but he said no one would be reduced in pay. He pointed out that Americans on the UNRRA payroll must be able to get along with representatives from the other United Nations as the agency will not only be international in scope, but the personnel will be made up from among the United Nations. He also pointed out that the employes who joined UNRRA would retain their Civil Service status and that their accumulated annual leave would be transferred and recognized by the agency.

School Holiday Begins, Pupils Plan to Work

As Washington's public schools closed yesterday for a two-week holiday until after New Year's Day, thousands of teen-age boys and girls—and several hundred school teachers—prepared to make it a profitable vacation with part-time employment in the pre-Christmas-rushed retail stores and postoffices.

The great majority of school pupils working through the holidays will be found in local postoffices—earning salaries ranging from $27.60 to $35 a week.

By next week, District Postmaster Vincent Burke estimated 3000 boys and girls will be employed as clerks, stamp tellers, mail sorters, etc. Paid at an hourly rate of 75 cents, girls will work between six and seven hours daily, the boys, seven or eight hours.

Hundreds of school teachers also are joining the part-time employment rush, Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock said. Most of them will be working in department stores and help-hungry small retail shops. They are barred only from employment in either Federal or District agencies.

Plays With Symphony

"Authentic prodigy"—Patricia Travers, who appears at Constitution Hall tonight, began playing at concerts when she was 6. The violin she holds is a Guarnerius which she plays alternately with a Stradivarius. She arrived here yesterday from New Hampshire and her appearance tonight will be her twenty-first

Morton Given 15 Years to Life In Slaying

John Walter Morton, 39, was sentenced yesterday to serve from 15 years to life imprisonment for the second degree bludgeon murder of Mrs. Grace G. Groome, 57, a Government stenographer, in Rock Creek Park. He was found guilty at a previous session of the court following a trial based on circumstantial evidence.

The radio mechanic ground his teeth as Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher said to Morton, ". . . the sentence not to exceed the duration of your life."

When asked whether he had anything to say before sentencing, Morton replied he wanted a new trial and a thorough investigation of the facts surrounding the crime. He slumped into his chair, maintaining he was innocent.

Dope Conviction

Chin Wo Lee, 46, of 519 H st. nw., was sentenced yesterday by Justice Matthew F. McGuire of District Court to eight months to two years imprisonment for the illegal sale, possession and transportation of narcotics.

Willie Rowe, 24, Negro Moslem was sentenced to one to four years imprisonment for failing to submit a supplementary questionnaire in violation of the Selective Training Act. According to Assistant United States Attorney John W. Conliff, Rowe refused to fill out the questionnaire even after he was taken before his draft board.

City News In Brief

A freak accident brought death yesterday to Clarence Hastings Ticer, jr., 37, of 2505 13th st. nw., who was struck by a stone thrown up by the wheels of a truck last Monday.

Police said Ticer was driving his car past the gate of Fort Belvoir when a trailer truck kicked up a rock which crashed through Ticer's windshield striking him on the head.

Ticer was taken to Georgetown University Hospital where he died of a depressed fracture of the forehead. Unaware of the accident, the truck driver continued on his way.

New Phi Beta Members

Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, who writes a weekly column for The Washington Post, and Myron C. Taylor, presidential representative to the Vatican, have been elected to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Associates at the fourth annual meeting of the organization in New York City, it was announced yesterday. Other new members include John J. McDonald, formerly counsel for the United States with the Mixed Claims Commission.

Sunday Postoffice Hours

All District postoffices will be open tomorrow between 3 and 8 p. m., as they were last Sunday, to dispatch handling of late Christmas mail.

First War Fund Allocations Are Approved

The board of directors of the Community War Fund yesterday approved appropriations totaling $3,701,000 for the next year with the largest sum of one million dollars going to the National War Fund.

In all, 25 different agencies will secure grants from the fund during the coming year.

Officials said that currently the fund stands at 93 per cent of its goal of $4,800,000 in the campaign which ended last month. The total amount collected to date includes 386,437 pledges representing $4,474,285.

E. C. Graham, general chairman of the fund, yesterday appointed an advisory and continuing committee which will work with the fund and member agencies in matters concerning sales, exhibitions, lectures and entertainments under the National War Fund policy.

Members of the committee are Edgar Morris, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Dr. George E. McCann, Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Dean Acheson and Abbot P. Mills.

Still in Wheel Chair

Polio Invalid Home Inmate For 50 Years

Rather proud of the fact that he has spent more Christmases at the Home for Incurables than any other patient, 54-year-old Phil McGrath celebrates half a century of residence there tomorrow.

He was first brought to the home, a frightened 4-year-old suffering from infantile paralysis, and was taught to use the wheel chair he has never since left.

But the years of invalidism have destroyed neither his unfailing good humor nor his determination to be what he terms "useful around the place."

So, with the skill he learned from a fellow patient, McGrath in recent years has repaired broken chairs, reweaving cane seats and restoring them to usefulness. And every afternoon, he can be seen busily wheeling himself about the corridors, laden with copies of newspapers for the patients.

McGrath is a native of Washington. Stricken when he was 2 years old, he was in Children's Hospital for two years before coming to the old Home for Incurables, at S and 27th sts. nw.

Jury Awards Boy Injury Damages

A jury awarded $7000 damages yesterday after a moving picture film was used in District Court for the first time to show that a 15-year-old boy suffered a game leg after it was broken in a traffic accident.

Defendants in the suit were the Phelps-Roberts Corp., 1825 14th st. nw., and a driver, Richard H. Tobin. The boy was Paul G. Duhamel of 5308 Connecticut ave. nw., in whose name his mother, Mrs. Helen Duhamel Martin, sued.

Deadlocked Murder Jury Discharged

The District Court jury hearing the second-degree murder trial of Catherine Hamel, 29, was discharged yesterday as hopelessly deadlocked after they failed to agree on a verdict after more than nine hours deliberation.

Miss Hamel, a waitress, claimed self-defense in the fatal shooting of her common-law husband, Walder F. Brown, 35, a railroad employe. He was found nude, shot through the heart, in the doorway of his apartment at 1340 New York ave. nw.

The jurymen went into chambers on Thursday afternoon, and after three hours were sent home for the night because of inconvenience and the difficulty of obtaining hotel accommodations. They resumed deliberations yesterday morning.

At 4 p. m. the jury was called in before Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher. He asked them how many felt the panel was deadlocked hopelessly. Seven persons raised their hands. Three felt there could be agreement and the other two failed to vote.

Sent back into chambers, the jurymen deliberated until 5:30 p. m., when Justice Eicher discharged them.

Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin said the Government intends to retry Miss Hamel, who is represented by Attorney Leopold J. Herwig.

At 2:30 p. m. yesterday Justice Eicher gave the jury the "Allen charge," in which he admonished minority members not to be "bull-headed" but to listen, at least, to the opinions of others.

Woman Is First To Collect Under New Price Ruling

Miss Josephine E. Umbeck, 3133 Connecticut ave. nw., became the first person yesterday to collect money under a United States Court of Appeals decision last Monday that any consumer who proves he has been overcharged is entitled to at least $50.

Judge Walter J. Casey in Small Claims Court awarded her the $50 after he found that Philip Rosen of the Standard Pharmacy, 1748 7th st. nw., sold a 79-cent ceiling pair of rubber gloves for $1.25 in violation of the Emergency Price Control Act.

Under this act, an overcharge entitled a consumer to $50 or three times the overcharge, whichever is greater. At least 15 cases of this type are now pending in the Municipal Court.

Quartermaster Unit Wins Treasury Flag

Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, quartermaster general, yesterday presented the Treasury T Flag to the personnel and organization and control division of his own office at ceremonies held in Building B, 2d and T sts. nw.

Accepting the award for the personnel division was Brig. Gen. Henry D. F. Munnikhuysen and for the organization and control division, Brig. Gen. Harold A. Barnes.

Defendant Tells Of Kindness to Kent's Mother

Often glaring at the man whose $61,000 in antique jewels she is accused of stealing, Mrs. Frances Dolmage took the witness stand in District Court yesterday to say she was the benefactor of complainant Otis Beal Kent, wealthy retired lawyer, and to tell the jury she had tended his mother in her last moments.

The trial was in its fourth session before Justice Matthew F. McGuire.

Mrs. Dolmage, on questioning by Defense Attorney Robert H. McNeill, said that once she had said a Catholic prayer for the repose of Mrs. Nanette B. Kent, mother of the man whose collection she is accused of taking while he was in Philadelphia late in July. Mrs. Dolmage said Kent criticized her for her efforts.

Mrs. Dolmage was the first witness for the defense. Earlier, Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius produced Beulah Davis, Negro, elevator operator, who said she saw Mrs. Dolmage on the stairway of Kent's building on the morning of July 28, the day of the theft. She said Mrs. Dolmage was carrying a black overnight bag, similar to the jewel case, in one hand and a package under the arm.

Clarence Martin, a lock expert, said the locks on Kent's door showed no tampering. He said the door could be opened only by a proper key. Kent says there were only two of these keys, one kept by him and the other by Mrs. Dolmage.

The trial will resume on Monday.

Dr. Seckinger Takes Reins As Gallinger's Acting Head

FIRST DAY CONFERENCE—Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger (right), deputy health officer assigned as acting superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, confers on his first day there with Dr. Lawrence Thomas, in charge of admission and the clinic

By Kurt Kelman

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, deputy health officer, took charge yesterday as acting superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, pledging the cooperation of the entire Health Department staff in making any improvements he may find necessary.

On temporary assignment to his post until a successor can be found for Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, who resigned as superintendent Wednesday, Dr. Seckinger on his first day received reports from all department heads before deciding upon further action.

Caught between two conferences in his small office, furnished solely with a desk and a couple of chairs, Dr. Seckinger—"as always eager to give the public all the information it desires"—said that the difficulties of the hospital were "mainly of a wartime emergency" but admitted that "there may be room for some improvement even under present circumstances."

Coordinator of health and hospitals since 1938 Dr. Seckinger declared that he was familiar with the problems "in general" and that he hoped to assure "the best sanitary conditions possible" by cooperation with the Health Department's sanitary engineer.

"Our food inspectors," he added, "who have done an excellent job in cleaning up restaurants, also are working on food-handling problems in the District hospitals. We will pay particular attention to this and also to rodent control."

A graduate of the University of North Carolina and Johns Hopkins University, Dr. Seckinger has been a health officer for a score years. Answering questions while standing up, patient though busy, he appeared ready to "do another job." He has done well so far.

He referred to the old wooden buildings, which have been evacuated some time ago, and said that they will be torn down as soon as certain engineering problems are solved. He said that some heating pipes for other buildings still in use go through these wooden structures and that this circumstance was delaying the clearance of the grounds of these obsolete houses.

Although declining to make a definite commitment when asked whether he would accept the job of superintendent permanently, Dr. Seckinger made it clear that he accepted the position with the understanding that it was a "temporary assignment" and pointed out that his background was mainly in preventive medicine.

Meanwhile, three doctors were appointed yesterday to survey Gallinger Hospital's psychopathic building and advise the Commissioners as to needs to bring the building and department up to accepted standards.

These were Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital; Dr. Samuel W. Hamilton of the United States Public Health Service, and Dr. Frederick Parsons of New York City.

Kuhn Pleads Not Guilty

Waldo Kuhn, 65, suspended Gallinger Hospital grounds superintendent, pleaded not guilty to larceny and embezzlement charges in connection with the theft of 30 sacks of cement at the hospital when he was arraigned yesterday before Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher in District Court.

Clarence L. Campbell, a former Gallinger supply department laborer, indicted on larceny and embezzlement charges in the theft of tar and tarpaper at the hospital, did not appear for his scheduled arraignment. A bench warrant was issued by Justice Eicher ordering Campbell's court appearance. It was said that Campbell did not appear because he had not been notified.

Superbridge May Replace Highway Span Over Potomac

A six-span super bridge to replace the present four-lane Highway Bridge across the Potomac River will be part of District post-war construction if a recommendation of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission is approved.

The new bridge will be designed to take care of the heavy load of north-south traffic expected after the war. Under the plan the present approaches of the Highway Bridge will be used.

Plans for the new bridge and necessary new southern approaches call for a tie in with another heavy-duty bridge to connect Alexandria with Shepards Point, D. C.

It was pointed out, however, that the Planning Commission is only an advisory body and that either the District government or Congress could revise the present plans. Approximately $50,000 of Federal funds are available for working plans.

Among those who have given the project extensive study are Frederick L. Olmstead, National Park Service consultant, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director.

At the same time the commission gave names to the main network of highways which lead to or are adjacent to the Pentagon Building. The method used in selecting the names was merely to use the established names of main arterial highways in that vicinity.

The four leading highways will be Lee blvd., Washington blvd., Shirley Memorial highway and the Jefferson Davis highway. Two subsidiary drives will bear the name of Boundary drive and Army and Navy drive.

Turkey Shortage Serious As D. C. Plans Its Yule Feast

A serious shortage of turkeys for Christmas is facing Washington, and dealers reported a scarcity of cranberries but a plentiful supply of other food foreseen for the holidays.

Dealers who customarily handle turkeys shipped in from the West said yesterday they were notified they would receive only 5 per cent of the quantity sold last year.

For instance, one dealer said that he sold 400,000 pounds of turkeys last year and he was notified that he would receive only 21,000 pounds this year.

Even the supply from nearby Virginia and Maryland, while better than the Western supply, is still 50 per cent below that of last year, dealers reported.

Cutting into stocks normally available for civilian usage in Maryland and Virginia have been huge Government orders, dealers reported.

However, there will be plenty of chicken and apparently of beef and pork products. Fish is not too plentiful and prices are high.

On the brighter side of the picture is the report that citrus fruits, oranges and grapefruit, are here in quantities greater than the demand.

Even the scarce onion is beginning to make its appearance with the arrival of shipments from Colorado.

Rooms Held for Armed Forces, Spokesman for Hotels Says

Transient rooms in the 29 hotels constituting the Hotel Association of Washington are occupied almost exclusively by members of the armed forces or those associated with Federal agencies, L. Gardner Moore, president of the association, said yesterday.

This, Moore said, is the result of a voluntary priority system which association hotels put into effect a year ago and which excludes from their reservation files those not engaged in war activity.

"Before the war," Moore said, "the biggest percentage of the hotel business was the visitor trade. The association hotels are no longer accepting the visitor trade. We have special arrangements with the Navy, for instance, by which we are informed of the accommodations which are to be needed by Navy men and their families."

Directors of the association elected were Thomas D. Carson, Floyd E. Rush, L. M. Firey, C. J. Mack, Henry B. Williams, Russell A. Conn and Fred G. Kenny. Other officers are Augustus Gumpers, vice president; C. J. Cook, treasurer; Arthur J. Harnett, executive secretary, and Joseph C. McGarraghy, counsel.

Expert Lauds City Manager Government

By Anne Hagner

A municipal government expert's chance visit to Washington during Senate District Subcommittee hearings on home rule yesterday resulted in a searching analysis of the merits of the city manager system provided in the McCarran measure.

The unexpected guest was Walter J. Millard, field secretary of the National Municipal League, who has made a study of city administrations for the past 24 years and happened to be in the Capital on another matter.

Adopted 537 Times

Millard, now a resident of Cincinnati, told Chairman McCarran and Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, another member of the suffrage subcommittee, that 537 cities and towns today are operating under the city manager plan, in municipalities totaling 11,500,000 people.

Under the McCarran bill, Washingtonians would be granted the right to elect a seven-man board of commissioners who in turn would appoint a city manager.

The plan, Millard said, was the only political device in America which, since the adoption of the Constitution, had been exported to other countries. It has worked with tremendous success in all the English-speaking nations of the world, he added.

Suggests Changes

After a brief perusal of the McCarran bill, he suggested several changes. Chief among these was the elimination of the ward system which, Millard declared, is "almost the most undemocratic device we could invent," and has been the greatest problem in American politics. Its main flaw, the witness went on, is that it can lead to control behind the scenes.

Millard also advised that the city manager be appointed without limitations on the length of his term and that he be empowered to name his own department heads, instead of delegating this to the commissioners.

W. S. Burke, representing the Howard Park Citizens' Association, went on record as supporting the McCurran bill, and told the committee that the present form of administration by board of commissioners was not responsive to the wishes of the citizens.

McCarran closed the meeting with a plea to businessmen and other citizens' groups to appear at the hearings, which will continue at 10:30 a. m. today and are expected to carry on next week.

Drafted Dads To Be Advised On Child Care

District Selective Service headquarters will cooperate in a community project to devise means of securing the economic stability for the families of drafted fathers, Civil War Services officials said yesterday.

Letters will go out to all fathers who have passed their initial physical examination, advising them of the existence of a "clearing house of information" for child care.

Civilian War Services, it was announced, expect to set up the information center next month after a sufficient number of volunteer aides are trained for the job.

The family security and child care and protection committees of the Civilian War Services will act in an advisory capacity only in hardship cases, trying to answer questions like:

1. How to live as they are living at present on the Government allotment.
2. Shall the mother seek less comfortable living quarters in order to "get by."
3. Shall the mother accept work, and if she does, who will take care of her children?
4. Shall she return to her home or the home of her in-laws?

Decline in Flu Reflected by Drop In Absenteeism

Absence reports in offices and places of business dropped again yesterday, and health officials said flu cases were continuing to decrease.

Despite continued cold and the fact that yesterday was the last day before the Christmas holiday for school children, absences dropped 2.5 per cent in elementary schools, from 17,096 to 15,943.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland said the medical society, Government agencies and business houses were reporting less absenteeism, and said absenteeism remaining was not in all cases predominantly flu.

Meanwhile, Director of Public Welfare Ray L. Huff announced that the epidemic had invaded the District Training School at Laurel, Md., where 75 inmates and 15 employes were ill of flu.

Fraser Disowns Plan For History Date Cut

Hugh Russell Fraser, chairman of the Committee on American History, said last night that a recent Associated Press article printed in The Post, in which recommendations were advanced for fewer dates for grade and high school students, was credited erroneously to his group.

The report said the proposals were made by the Committee on American History in Schools and Colleges, headed by Edgar B. Wesley of the University of Minnesota, and Fraser said that although he agreed with some of the recommendations he called attention to what he termed "blind spots."

Make It Do

Need Christmas Tree Ornaments? Make Your Own; It's Easy and Fun

It's easy and fun to make your own Christmas ornaments. We know—because we made ours!

We started out in our own little corner, intending to experiment quietly with the ribbons, yarn, paints, and other odds and ends that we gathered from last year's Christmas boxes and the scrap bag. But it wasn't long until almost the whole department was contributing ideas! Those who lacked artistic ability knew the mechanical aspects of fastening heads to necks and how to make things stand up—something we never could do.

Success Comes Soon

The first ones were frankly quite horrible looking, but it wasn't long before we hit a success, we decided to make a tree of fluffs of cotton. We dabbed the cotton with wet paint and then sprinkled Christmas snow over it. The snow adheres to the wet paint and absorbs the color. We pinned a ribbon on the back and it was finished.

Encouraged by this bit of success we decided to make a tree. In our desk we found empty tape spools and we used one for the base of the tree. Another fluff of cotton made the top. Again we dabbed on different colors of paint and sprinkled snow over the wet paint. A paper star for the top and there was our tree!

Someone suggested using eggs for ornaments—after all why should Easter have a monopoly on them? You can make a small hole in the egg and empty its contents (this means eggs for dinner). Then all you do is paint the eggshell any color you wish and decorate with gold stars or seals. We pasted a paper doily on ours.

The Christmas angel took about three minutes to make. It's simply a piece of cotton and two wings cut out of gold paper.

Somebody contributed a Santa made of yarn. She said it was just a matter of gathering lengths of yarn and tying them together. His face is a Christmas seal and cotton was used to stuff his front. (we think perhaps he looks too fat for a wartime Santa).

The other yarn dolls were made in a similar manner. The arms are made separately and fit through the yarn body. Tie the yarn at the top of the head (leaving enough for hair), the neck, the waist, wrists and ankles. Embroider the faces.

Economy Wrappings

And what could be more practical (and plentiful) than using the comic section or even the news section to wrap your gifts?

The little church shown in the photograph is really an achievement. Yet it was very simple to make. A piece of paper folded into squares was used for the church. The steeple consists of about a third of a circle folded into five sections with triangles cut in two sides to fit over the roof. Bits of cellophane paper were used for the stained glass windows.

We finally had to stop experimenting since deadline time was drawing near. We had broken one fingernail, tar and feathered ourselves with paste and cotton, and we will certainly be ashamed when the cleaning woman comes around tonight. But it was lots of fun, the ornaments cost us practically nothing, we feel patriotic, and we can't wait to start trimming that tree!

Qualifying for the Peace Table

What type of woman should be at the peace table? (Note that the question no longer is: SHOULD a woman be at the peace table?)

Mrs. Roosevelt has suggested that women experienced in responsible government jobs are the best equipped to help in organizing a peaceful world. There will of course be loud protests over this. She also has said this Nation's representative should be younger than herself (59). This may occasion even louder protests. Since the question is in the ring, here goes:

A woman experienced in successful government admnistration would of course be an asset to the peace conference—provided she had other necessary qualifications. But to limit rigidly peace table candidates by experience, age, occupation, temperament or any one attribute would narrow the field of selection too much. This country has few enough outstanding peace table possibilities among women—or even men—as it is.

No Fast Lines As to Age

Also, qualifications should not be put too much on a materialistic basis. Take age. Numerical age is a relative matter. Measurement of biological or physical age as yet in its infancy. And what about mental and emotional age? Moreover, some women suffer at 35 from hardening of the mind. Some women do not at 65.

What then should be the qualifications of a woman (or women) sent to the peace negotiations

It would of course be easy to outline the specifications for a paragon, to say she should be a woman of exceptional brains, wide experience, varied and profound knowledge, broad vision, magnetic personality, attractive appearance, large soul, all served up with a liberal dash of genius. But—she would be Saint-Beuve's "woman who never is found."

We are going to have to make a compromise over a goddess at the peace table. However, a great deal will be required of the woman who crashes this historic event—much more than that of her men associates. So—here is a rough outline of what we might expect her to approximate.

She should fundamentally possess character, not the buried vein of gold type, but character apparent enough to inspire the confidence of other women and the respect of men.

Political Wisdom Is Needed

She should be able to deal with people tactfully, even politically, and to compromise without sacrificing principle.

She should be able to work with men without using guile, belligerency, or the "Yes Mr. Smith" technique.

She should understand the problems of organization and administration—if from governmental experience, so much the better.

She should not be a woman with a cause.

She should have a background of knowledge that would fit her for peace table deliberations.

She should have a clear, alert, open and courageous mind.

She should be (for want of a better word) psychic, that is sensitive to the spiritual forces of the universe, a woman capable of both aspiration and inspiration.

She should have a sense of humor—this in order that she may escape being that most deadly of all blights, a noble woman with a too literal mind, also because she will need to have the laughter of the gods in her soul if she is to survive the ordeal of attempting to make the world over.

On With The Dance

New Boogie Woogie Dance Steps, With Strange Names, Born of Night Life

By Jean Craighead

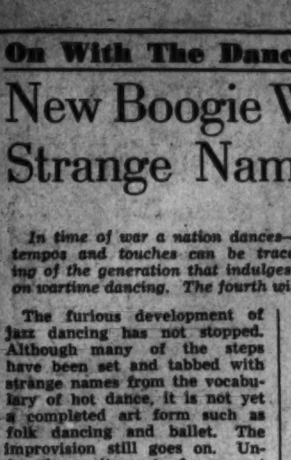
In time of war a nation dances—dances as it never danced before. And in its "light fantastic" tempos and touches can be traced the restlessness, efforts at escape, and the general dervish whirling of the generation that indulges in it with greatest abandon. This is the third in a series of articles on wartime dancing. The fourth will appear next Saturday.

The furious development of jazz dancing has not stopped. Although many of the steps have been set and tabbed with strange names from the vocabulary of hot dance, it is not yet a completed art form such as folk dancing and ballet. The improvision still goes on. Under the excitement of war zoot kids and dance connoisseurs in Washington night clubs have twisted the boogie woogie into the latest mutation-Cattin.

Cattin looks like an interpretation of the manpower shortage with the girl doing solo steps, or "shines," around the boys. He holds the tempo with a deep knee rotation, and at times works a counterpoint of dance against the rhythm and movements of his partner.

This healthy and vigorous dancing is a potpourri of steps that date back as far as the Cakewalk. The Shag, which came along about 1930 from the West's free-swinging cowhands, is remembered with some shifty footsteps in Cattin, but that hoppity dance is not as useful now as it was at the beginning of the '30's.

Following upon the heels of the Shag, and from the same source, came the famous and delightful Big Apple. Many believed this group dance was new and different; as a matter of fact, it is as old as religion and temple dancing. The Big Apple did a lot for the jazz dance; it not only brought a carnival atmosphere into the ballroom, but it put a great emphasis on individual improvising. In the middle of a circle of tempo-beating dancers, a soloist "shone" for the people. Here peckin' and truckin" were recognized, and the old Charleston was picked up, brushed off and swung to the smooth new jazz music.



Already it is forcing the dance to borrow from wider sources—Russia, China, Arabia, and ceremonial dances of the world.

Colleges and universities as well as high-tone night clubs gave this first return of group dancing a warm greeting, and it spread across hte country in less than a year.

No dance brought as much fun and noise as this swing version of the old religious and square dances, that started off with an easy-going Jockey step or tempo setter and ended up in somersaults and shimmies.

Group dancing was not long-lived. The Congo line came up from South America and carried on as the Big Apple began to decline, but the young people preferred to elaborate on partner dancing and with the new inspirations picked from the limelight of the Big Apple, they went back to a new genus of partner swing.

Swing music, a new terminology for more of the same, was recognized about the middle of the 1930's after Jimmy Dorsey had polished his Dixieland Band to sophistication and specialized in slower Foxtrots to satisfy the dancing demands of the Westchester young set and the Glen Island Casino. He originated the hot solo backed with an ensemble, and gave the dancers what they needed to build up their Trip Jig Walks and Susie-Q's.

Before the war, the source of the new dancing trends was relatively easy to follow out of the South, out of the West or off the streets of New York. Now, however, with the tremendous shift of populations, influences are less regional, and less clearly defined. What this will do to dancing will be interesting to watch.

Fete for Famous French Composer Takes Place Today

Yes, the party planned by Henri Hoppenot, French Minister of the Committee of National Liberation, and Mme. Hoppenot, for this afternoon will take place, as scheduled.

There has been some doubt of about this in the minds of many Washingtonians, since the fete was arranged in honor of Darius Milhaud, famous French composer. M. Milhaud, you will remember, was ill the other evening and could not conduct his symphony. But he has now recovered and will give his talk on "Music and the Theater," his experiences and memories this afternoon at the home of M. and Mme. Hoppenot on Massachusetts ave.

One of the most noted of modern French composers, M. Milhaud left his homeland after the Nazi forces took over Paris. He came to the United States and accepted the chair of music at Mills College in California. His compositions have been played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Serge Koussevitsky.

Direct Hits Scored On Wotje Airdrome In Marshall Islands

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 17 (AP).—Heavy Liberator bombers of the American Seventh Army Air Force, making their second attack of the day, smashed the Japanese airdrome on Wotje Atoll of the Marshall Island with numerous direct hits at dusk on Wednesday, it was announced today.

As in the earlier attack announced last night, there was no enemy interception, although Wotje has a good airfield. Antiaircraft fire was light.

For eight straight days American planes have bombed or strafted one or more of the 32 atolls in the mid-Pacific Marshall group, 300 miles north of the American-held Gilberts.

The enemy's Taroa airfield on Maloelap Atoll also was raided Wednesday, said last night's announcement. There two of 30 Zeros were shot down, eight were probably destroyed and eight were damaged, the Navy reported, while we lost one Liberator.

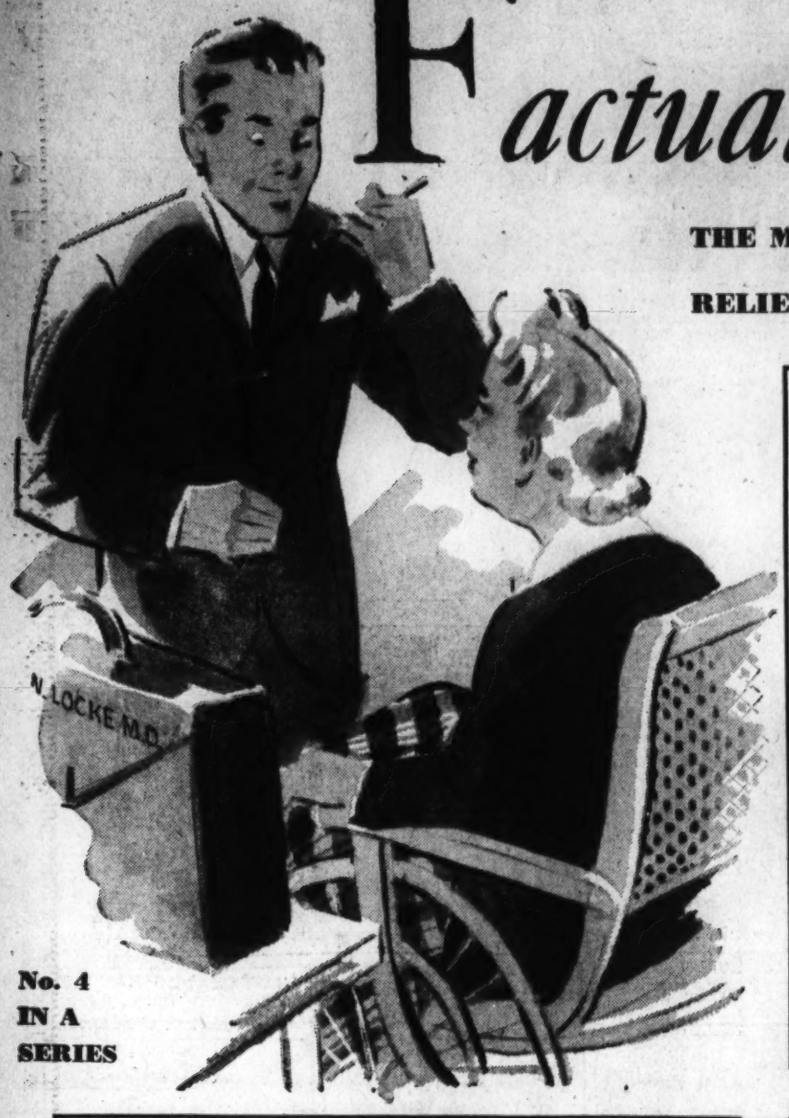
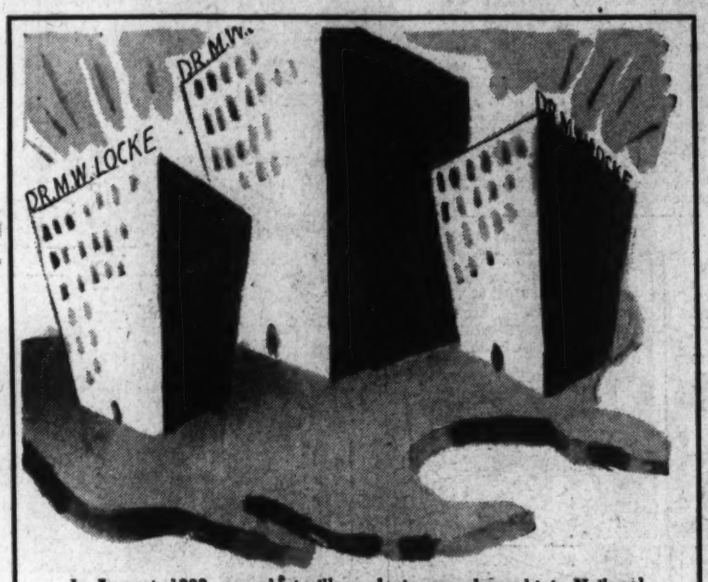
THE MIRACLE STORY OF A HUMBLE CROSSROADS DOCTOR . . . WHOSE SKILL BROUGHT RELIEF TO MILLIONS . . . AND WHOSE FOOTWEAR MADE "DR. LOCKE" A HOUSEHOLD WORD.



No. 4 IN A SERIES



In August, 1932, a modest village doctor was brought to National attention, when Cosmopolitan Magazine published "The Pain Killer" by Rex Beach . . . an article telling of the Dr. M. W. Locke clinic, at Williamsburg, Ontario, Canada . . . and of the doctor's superb skill in treating foot and bodily ailments through manipulation of the feet.

From all parts of America, thousands visited the clinic, and the doctor treated as many as 1500 persons a day. But it was found that patients frequently lost the benefit of the treatments, when ordinary shoes were worn . . . and in the fall of 1932 great American manufacturers asked for permission to make the shoes designed by Doctor Locke.

To give every person an opportunity to wear the Dr. Locke shoes, even though they had never attended his clinic, the Doctor authorized their manufacture . . . and in the spring of 1933 the first Dr. Locke shoes were shown by retail stores throughout the Nation. Their acceptance was instantaneous.

The original franchise to manufacture shoes for Men, Women, and Children, was granted to the Lockwedge Shoe Corporation, and in less than five years production grew to the point where three entire factories in various parts of the country were needed to satisfy public demand.

From the very beginning, Dr. Locke Shoes were made available to the people of Washington through The Hecht Company . . . and tens of thousands of men, women and children in the Nation's Capital have been staunch and happy wearers of this famous footwear throughout the years.

Today, the Doctor Locke Shoe not only retains the inherent benefits, as originally designed by Dr. Locke during the days of his clinic . . . but also has attained smart styling, and simple lines . . . without sacrificing complete comfort and proper foot-support.

And here are the famous hands of "The Pain Killer" . . . the hands that brought relief to countless thousands . . . the classic hands of the humble country doctor . . . the hands that made foot-play at The Hecht Co. . . . where you'll also find his famous shoes.
